Oil Talks March 9

Barrett Gets U.S. Date

Premier Barrett said Monday he will visit Washington, D.C., March 9 for talks with top officials of the U.S. department of the interior on the Alaskan pipeline and West Coast tanker route.

Barrett, who called the White House 10 days ago to ask for a meeting to register B.C.'s strongest opposition to the U.S. proposals, said Monday he won't be going there "just to be opposed to something."

He would give no details of the B.C. stand, however, adding it would be made public at simultaneous press conferences in Victoria and Ottawa as soon as his meeting with Acting Secretary of the Interior J. Whittaker was over.

"I won't be going there just to be opposed to something," Barrett said. "That's all for now. We're not negative critics. Even in opposition we always had an alternative to offer. And we want to deal in the proper protocol."

Liberal leader David Anderson, speaking in the Legislature following Barrett's original statement, said B.C. and Canada is going to have to offer the Americans something in return if they want to avoid the Alaska pipeline and tanker route.

Anderson said at the time Canada shouldn't insist on control and ownership over an alternate pipeline carrying Alaskan oil to North Dakota. But Barrett replied he didn't favor a foreign owned pipeline crossing this country.

Barrett said Monday he's been in contact with External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp who has arranged for a Canadian representative to accompany the B.C. delegation. The premier will be accompanied on the trip by B.C. Resources Minister Robert Williams.

Plant Mirrors Joy, Sorrow

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet scientists report they have succeeded in getting a geranium plant emotionally involved.

Dr. V. Bushkin told the newspaper Socialist Industry that scientists hypnotized a man and aroused his emotions of joy and sorrow. Instruments attached to a geranium leaf at some distance from the man responded to similar emotions, he said.

Israel Unaware Plane Had Passengers: Meir

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir said Monday that Israeli warplanes would not have shot down a Libyan airliner if there was any suggestion that passengers were aboard.

Mrs. Meir, on her arrival for an official visit with President Nixon, also said the army had "standing orders" to avoid any other such incident.

". . . I will not go into it now, but if there was any inkling to our chief of staff . . . to our men . . . that there were passengers, despite all this peculiar movement of the plane . . . naturally nothing would have been done to it," she said.

But she stressed at a Dulles International Airport news conference that attempts to bring peace to the Middle East should be separated from the Libyan plane incident.

"We should take the two things apart," she said. "The people of Israel feel a deep sorrow about this tragedy . . . But I am convinced that during my visit here this tragedy will not interfere with the other items to be discussed."

Egypt said Monday it would ask the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) to take action on the downing of the civilian aircraft by Israeli warplanes over the Sinai Peninsula lastweek.

An Egyptian delegation spokesman said the Cairo government would ask the 125-member council, which opens meetings here today, to take "appropriate measures in the light of the magnitude of Israel's crime."

In Jerusalem, Defense Minister Moshe Dayan put the official death toll in the Israeli downing of the Libyan airliner at 104 with seven survivors.

Previous Israeli announcements referred to 106 dead and seven survivors, a figure that matched Libyan reports of 113 passengers and crew aboard the aircraft.

Mrs. Meir meets with President Nixon at the White House Thursday. She declined to discuss topics to be taken up during the talks with the president, other high administration officials and members of congress.

In answer to questions about the purpose of her visit, she said she hopes to meet with Nixon and other administration officials for "very frank talks about the Middle East and what can be done there."

Guards, Money Vanish

DUSSELDORF (Reuter) — Police launched a massive hunt Monday for two young security guards after an armored security truck carrying four million West German marks — about $1,200,000 — to a bank here was found abandoned and nearly empty.

Police spokesmen said the international police organization, Interpol, had been called in to search for the two men, employees of a Cologne security firm.

Police said only 210,000 marks — about $76,000 — had been recovered from the armored truck — making it the biggest theft in Germany since the Second World War.

The money was being transported to a Dusseldorf bank from another branch.

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Six persons were killed when their executive jet brushed the top of an apartment building and crashed into nearby woods shortly after the pilot told the control tower he had struck some birds.

Liberal Budget Tops Big Hurdle

OTTAWA (CP) — Backed by the New Democratic Party, the minority Liberal government survived one of the most crucial votes of the new parliament Monday night, defeating a Conservative challenge to Finance Minister John Turner's budget by a vote of 140 to 111.

The outcome of the confidence vote appeared to ensure approval of Turner's tax-cut-and-pension-increase budget when the final vote in the six-day budget debate is taken Wednesday night.

The New Democrats announced the day after Turner brought down his budget that they would support the key proposals he put forward.

Hanoi Puts Freeze On Prisoner Trade

PARIS (CP) — Canada appears to have boxed itself into a diplomatic corner with its demand for a continuing political authority to which Vietnamese truce observers can report violations.

With Communist delegates to the 13-party peace conference indicating they want no part of the Canadian proposal. Canada may have no alternative but to withdraw its observer force by the extended deadline of April 30, as it has threatened to do.

Presiding at the first plenary session Monday, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp proposed that the conference itself be developed as the essential political forum to ensure action is taken to halt any reported peace violations.

But both Hanoi and the Viet Cong, aided by China, rejected the idea, especially Sharp's proposal that reports of violations be channeled through Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim of the United Nations who would have power to reconvene the conference. Waldheim's attending the Paris meeting along with the six Communist and six non-Communist foreign ministers.

Informants said Sharp is prepared to negotiate on the role of Waldheim to meet Communist objections although the basic Canadian demand for a continuing political authority remains.

Sharp's proposal that the conference be constituted as the political authority is a watering down of his original proposal that the UN Security Council be named as the supervising body.

Originally Canada threatened to withdraw its troops by March 30 unless a political authority was established. Sharp told a news conference Canada wants to act responsibly and the deadline is being extended to April 30 to provide time to pick another observer group if Canada finds it necessary to withdraw.

Some Canadian officials were reported disappointed with what they described as the half-hearted United States support to Sharp's proposal.

It appeared the communists will insist that there be no foreign interference in Vietnamese affairs. They insist that even foreign reconstruction aid should be negotiated on a country-by-country basis and not channelled through some international organization.

U.S. State Secretary William Rogers attempted to adopt a conciliatory attitude, however, Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh, foreign minister for the Viet Cong's provisional revolutionary government, appeared unsympathetic.

She maintained that her people won "the most brutal war of aggression in history," that the Saigon adminstration is torturing hundreds of thousands of "patriots" and that the U.S. is pursuing a policy

SAIGON (UPI) — North Vietnam said Tuesday it will not release any more American prisoners of war until the U.S. accepts more responsibility for enforcing the ceasefire and communist representatives in South Vietnam are given better treatment.

Lt. Col. Bui Tin, a North Vietnamese spokesman, said, "We are in a position of absolutely having to solve these problems, although we don't want to be placed in this position.

"We are entirely in sympathy with the wives, mothers and relatives of the prisoners," he said. But, he added, "A very serious situation has developed — very serious because the ceasefire is not being respected."

Tin said the prisoner release would be halted on orders from his government in Hanoi until:

- Communist delegates to the Joint Military Commission (JMC) are given real diplomatic status.
- Housing and working areas for the JMC are improved.
- There is better observance of the truce.
- The U.S. accepts greater responsibility for enforcing the ceasefire agreement.
- Further attacks on communist delegates to the JMC are prohibited.

U.S. sources said the American delegation to the JMC had not received any notification from North Vietnamese delegates of the halt in prisoner exchange. North Vietnamese members failed to appear for a scheduled meeting of the JMC subcommission on captured persons Tuesday morning.

A defence department source in Washington said the U.S. was trying to maintain a spirit of co-operation despite the delaying tactics used by the communists. "For the time being, the general feeling is don't rock the boat," he said.

Hanoi Charged With Making Bootleg Base

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. sources reported Monday that American reconnaissance planes have turned up evidence that North Vietnam is preparing its first air base in South Vietnam with a battery of Soviet-built missiles to protect it.

The Saigon government presented U.S. aerial photographs to show SAM2 missile sites built after the Jan. 28 ceasefire around Khe Sanh in the northern quarter of South Vietnam.

Saigon's representatives asked the Internationa Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) for an immediate investigation.

They said Communist delegations to the four-party Joint Military Commission (JMC) refused to send a team to investigate what they called a "blatant" ceasefire violation with "a clear potential for sowing hatred."

U.S. sources said North Vietnamese engineers are rebuilding a 4,000-foot air strip at Khe Sanh that was first constructed by American engineers in the late 1960s.

In a letter to the ICCS, Lt.-Gen. Du Quoc Dong, chief of the South Vietnamese military delegation, said:

"We believe that the introduction of SAM2 missiles into South Vietnam after the ceasefire, as well as the overt establishment of missile sites at Khe Sanh, are actions which may well ignite the fuse of resurgent war in the near future."

Homemade Liquor Kills 50

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Homemade liquor killed 50 persons the past 24 hours at Suriapet town and its neighboring villages in the southern Andhra Pradesh state, officials in the state capital of Hyderabad said today.

They said the condition of several others in hospital was critical.

The Deccan Chronicle, Hyderabad's main English daily, reported nearly 1,000 persons were suffering from the effects of the liquor. Suriapet, located 75 miles east of Hyderbad and 250 miles north of Madras City, is a roadway junction for passenger buses and freight lorries.

Unofficial reports placed the number of dead a higher figure.

Several persons in the countryside have died after buying the liquor from smugglers and unlicensed shops at Suriapet and police have not traced the victims, unofficial reports in Hyderabad said.

Japan Fears U.S. Economic War

'We May Well Need Shelters'

By SAM JAMESON
Colonist - Los Angeles Times Service

TOKYO — A Japanese cabinet minister has confided that he fears Tokyo may become President Nixon's post-Vietnam target.

"We may well need shelters before this ends," the minister said, only half joking about the economic offensive against Japan that he feels is shaping up in Washington.

Outlines of the American intention to press Japan for removal of trade barriers, now that Tokyo has been forced into its second parity change in 14 months, have taken shape in a series of pronouncements by government officials, including Nixon himself. The targets also have been cited: Japan's last 33 import quotas, non-tariff trade barriers, high tariffs, and American access to investment in Japan — particularly in the retailing field.

In April or early May, William D. Eberle, the president's chief trade negotiator, will get together with Japanese officials for the fourth time in a year to attempt to win concessions. Then, probably in June, American cabinet secretaries in charge of economic affairs will fly to Japan for a full-dress session of the U.S.-Japan trade and economic committee.

Nixon's first economic move against Japan — and the rest of the world — Aug. 15, 1971, came when he suspended the convertibility of the dollar to gold and slapped a 10 per cent surcharge on most imports into the United States. Two months later he coerced Japan — and three other Asian nations — into signing agreements to limit textile exports to the United States.

Then came the 10 per cent devaluation of the dollar.

Yasuhiro Nakasone, minister of international trade and industry, told a meeting of the ministry's regional director that makers of Christmas decorations, scarves, sporting goods, eyeglasses, artificial pearls, and buttons were threatened by the new parity change.

The problem, in part, is that the Nixon moves have touched only the external monetary blemishes without treating the internal trade crats, 15 Socreds and two Independents in the 264-seat House.

The vote was taken on a Conservative amendment that acknowledged "certain beneficial provisions" in the Turner budget but said it failed to produce measures that would cope adequately with inflation, unemployment and the need for increased public participation in "Canadian business enterprise and development."

As a budget motion, challenging government fiscal policy, the amendment constituted a confidence test in the Trudeau administration.

Debate on the budget Monday produced a prediction from George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings), and a denial from Justice Minister Otto Lang, that the government is gearing up for a June election.

Calling the document "a 100-per-cent election budget . . . delivered by the greatest con artist this country has ever seen," Hees predicted the government would seek dissolution of Parliament in April and go to the people in June.

Lang said the budget was "but one of many" Turner would bring down before another election. If members of Parliament served their country as they ought to, he added, "it should be a good long time between now and the next election."

The minister said the budget, which featured income-tax cuts, pension increases and tariff reductions, followed Liberal party tradition by addressing itself primarily to low-income groups.

Lang said Conservative spokesmen seemed to agree the budget was not expansionary enough, but could not decide how much the government should be spending. Mr. Turner has budgeted for a $2-billion deficit.

Mr. Lang said Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) suggested a $2½-billion figure while Claude Wagner (PC—St. Hyacinthe) advocated $4 billion. "So the Conservative bidding is under way."

Science Minister Jeanne Sauve, making her first Commons speech, said the budget offers "the clearest possible proof" that the government is concerned with middle-income taxpayers, those who foot the major share of the tax burden.

She said tax cuts announced by Mr. Turner are of fundamental importance and the decision to make inflation deductible for income-tax purposes guarantees that tax cuts brought in now will remain effective in the future.

Dealing with her own department, she said long-term policies are being followed to produce the greatest possible social and economic benefit from advances in technology.

Ran Harding (NDP—Kootenay West) said the budget should be approved for the positive measures it contains but Mr. Turner should begin immediately to prepare for another within a few months time.

Flim Flam Artist Outfoxes Police

LANDSHUT, West Germany (UPI) — The most confident confidence man of them all has turned up in this Bavarian town. He took police for $2,069 with one of the oldest tricks of all.

Police said it happened this way:

A 17-year-old apprentice mechanic told detectives he knew an arms peddler he wanted to see go to jail.

Police advanced the man $2,069 after he said he needed the money to carry out a fake arms deal with the suspect.

When police wised up, the money was spent and the arms peddler was non-existent, as he always had been.

"against peace and national accord."

Foreign Minister Chi Peng-fei of China was firm on the point of limiting the peace-keeping process to the former warring parties.

"The responsibility for the thorough implementation of the Paris agreement lies with the signatories," Chi insisted.

But Chi also pledged not to do anything that hinders or violates the agreement. "We are ready to work together with all other participants of the conference to this end."

Nguyen Thanh Le of North Vietnam and Ly Van Sau of the Viet Cong spurned the Sharp-Rogers call for some special new reporting process to help the control commission, made up of Canada, Indonesia, Poland and Hungary.

"The Vietnam agreements contain enough bodies already," Le said.

On Laos and Cambodia Sau was emphatic: "These countries must be allowed to settle their problems without foreign interference."

illnesses — of both nations, said Tadashi Hosomi, adviser to the finance minister who participated in the European negotiation that led to the dollar devaluation and the floating of the yen.

Japanese factories tooled to produce products that can only be used overseas — such as stereo sets operating on a different electrical cycle than Japan's — are not likely to give up without a fight, regardless of a monetary change. And cheaper dollars aren't going to increase imports of American goods that are excluded by Japanese quotas.

Nor is a monetary change going to increase the exports of an American manufacturer who doesn't even know the procedure for shipping a product out of the United States.

PoW Flow Ends

Under a timetable announced at the time of the signing of the ceasefire agreement, the second phase of prisoner exchange had been expected to begin no later than Tuesday.

Tin said, "As you know, the first release of American prisoners (Feb. 12) went off very well and we have always adopted the correct attitude on the release of American prisoners into the proper hands.

"We are forced to be put into this position. We have to express this attitude for the good of the lives of all Vietnamese people. We hope the other side will respond by putting down their arms and allegations.

"We were serious when we signed the agreement and we are very serious about implementing all of the agreement. We were forced to take up arms to protect ourselves and now we are serious about laying down our arms for peace," he said.

Tin's announcement came as the 60-day winding down of U.S. miliary involvement in South Vietnam passed its halfway point. Heavy fighting and more charges of truce violations were reported.

The South Vietnamese command reported 110 truce violations in the 24-hour period that ended at dawn Tuesday. Violations were at a relatively low level for the post-truce period. But the total was four greater than the previous day's and well above the average daily total of attacks.

Sectional truce supervisory teams of the International Commission for Control and Supervision (ICCS) still were undergoing orientation at seven regional headquarters and four of the 37 sites were yet to be surveyed for deployment. The JMC was into the second half of its 60-day life span without its sectional teams deployed and far short of its scheduled complement of Viet Cong members.

The ceasefire completed its 30th day at 8 a.m. Tuesday (4 p.m. Victoria time, Monday).

Call It Good Fiction

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

By G. C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I've been reading a paperback novel about a nurse who by mistake gave a patient a 10 cc. syringe of air instead of medicine. The patient died in a few minutes. Now is this true or is it fiction? — B.M.

Put it down to fiction — with a small tinge of factual possibility. Makes a dramatic story, though, doesn't it?

There is such a thing as an "air embolism," that is, a bubble of air in an artery. This can, depending on where it lodges and how big it is, cause a stoppage of the blood flow to the part of the body served by that artery.

If, by some quirk, the nurse's accidental bubble of air happened to go almost instantly to the heart or some critical point in the central circulation area, then I suppose the story would be possible.

But of this I can assure you: there are more reliable ways to cause death — including some that appear in fiction. You see; I read a paperback now and then, too!

In actual fact, tiny bits of air cause no trouble. Larger bubbles may occur from severe injuries, or in the decompression illness of divers — "the bends."

There are certain things very wrong about the fictional story, things that just don't fit with the way things really happen. For one, the nurse wouldn't have been injecting into an artery. She might, however, have been injecting into a vein.

And in venous injections, it is drilled into nurses (and doctors) until it is second nature to make sure there are no visible bubbles before a needle is ever inserted. And as for an empty syringe?

No, let's put that fiction accident down for what it is. Fiction.

U.S. Skylab Project Still on Schedule

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — The Skylab crew-ferry ship went to the firing pad Monday and the launch director said testing of the house-sized space station was on schedule for a May flight.

The Saturn 1B rocket and Apollo spacecraft combination that will fly the first three astronauts to the Earth orbital laboratory was moved the 3⅛ miles from the vehicle assembly building (UAB) to the pad in about 5½ hours by a massive eight-tread transporter.

The Skylab itself remained in the VAB for seven more weeks of tests and flight preparations. It and its Saturn 5 rocket are to be moved to a second launch pad in mid-April.

Skylab is tentatively scheduled for launch May 14 into a 270-mile-high orbit. Astronauts Charles "Pete" Conrad, Dr. Joseph Kerwin and Paul Weitz will take off the next day in the Apollo that was moved to the takeoff site Monday.

Launch director Walter Kapryan said engineers completed a major series of tests on the big space station Sunday. The exercise was finished three days behind schedule, but Kapryan said the testing went well enough to keep on the recently revised schedule for a mid-May launching.

Davis Balances Scales In Coast Salmon Fight

VANCOUVER (CP) — Environment Minister Jack Davis Sunday fired back at Washington Governor Dan Evans who complained last week that Canadian fishermen take more than one million salmon off Washington State while U.S. fishermen take less than 1,000 off the west coast of Vancouver Island.

The governor called for an end to Canada-U.S. reciprocal fishing arrangements.

Davis said Evans was presenting only the U.S. side of the argument and the figures covered only Columbia River salmon.

"The Americans intercept our salmon from the Fraser and the Skeena and, roughly speaking, they take as many of our fish as we do of theirs," the minister said.

He said the Americans were just jockeying for position in the next round of negotiations for sharing the fishery. The treaty will expire April 20 and the next meeting is scheduled for the end of March.

Parti Quebecois Hardens Stand

By BILL COULTHARD

MONTREAL (CP) — The Parti Quebecois made it official during the weekend that Quebec independence will be automatic if the party takes power and no referendum will be held on the question of separation itself.

It also opted at its semi-annual convention for a presidential system along United States lines, with a separate executive branch whose president and cabinet would not be responsible to the legislature.

In addition, the party hardened its policy toward the English-language minority, continuing to recognize the right of the Anglophone community to its own schools but setting a limit on the size of the English school system.

The convention, working on a program to attract new votes in the next provincial election, was attended by about 1,180 delegates and 1,200 observers.

The resolution making it policy that a Parti Quebecois government would automatically take Quebec out of Confederation confirms what has always been unofficial policy expressed by PQ leader Rene Levesque.

Now, however, the party program for the first time contains a provision that "sovereignty will be achieved in principle by proclamation of the national assembly without the need of having recourse to a referendum."

Mr. Levesque, in an interview later said:

"Since we're going to be elected under a British parliamentary system, it means that if we have a parliamentary majority, basically that government has the right to exercise fully its mandate.

"Which would legally mean that the parliament, I think, would be fully entitled to proclaim independence, because we would be elected on that platform."

Arctic Limited To Canadians?

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is considering limiting shipping rights in Arctic waters to Canadian-flag vessels, Transport Minister Jean Marchand said in a written Commons reply Monday.

The reply was submitted in response to a question by Michael Forrestall (PC — Dartmouth-Halifax East).

Mr. Marchand said the government "has no intention at this time to institute a Canadian merchant marine for ocean-going trades."

"However, Canada does have a large internal fleet which, at the present time, is largely concentrated in the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence trade. This national fleet has ... preferred rights when trading between ports and places in Canada ...

"Commonwealth vessels are allowed to participate in coasting — trade activities which involve the Arctic zone. The government is presently examining our coasting-trade policy with a view to extending the opportunities for the Canadian internal fleet by reserving the Arctic zone and off-shore areas to Canadian-flag vessels."

Premier Dave Barrett earlier this month called on the federal government to increase its 17 per cent subsidy on construction of ocean-going ships to spur creation of a Canadian merchant marine.

He also said B.C. would like to have the power to give preference to Canadian-manned, Canadian-built ships for the carrying of B.C. cargoes.

In another reply to Mr. Forrestall, the minister said the government does not intend to require that shipments from the Arctic to other countries be carried in Canadian-flag ships.

Letter Hits PNE Bill

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pacific National Exhibition president W. M. Anderson said legislation proposed by Vancouver East MLA Bob Williams to scrap the current board of PNE directors is politically inspired and neglects the interests of British Columbians as a whole.

Anderson made the charges in a three-page letter mailed late Friday to about 1,000 individuals or groups with some PNE interest, particularly those connected with livestock and agriculture.

Start using the Government's own rules to save a bundle on income tax.

Here's a perfectly legal way to use the Government's own rules to save on income tax.

The Government has a law that says in effect; "If you save now for your retirement, we'll let you pay as much as $4,000 into a registered retirement savings plan every year, and we'll let you knock it off your income".

(It used to be $2,500, but this year the Government has upped it to $4,000. Some things are getting better.)

So you merely lower your taxable income by putting up to $4,000 in our registered retirement savings plan and don't pay the tax on it.

Say you're self-employed, married, have two dependants under 16 years of age and earned sixteen thousand in 1972. Depending on the province you live in, your tax saving could amount to $1,161 which is a bundle in any man's language.

To top it all off, the money you save can make more money. Essentially there are four ways you can do this. You can have us invest it in stocks. You can have us invest it for a guaranteed rate of interest. You can have us invest it in income producing bonds and mortgages. Or you can divide your money up using any combination of these three alternatives.

*ASK FOR DETAILS AT PARTICIPATING BRANCHES

The beauty of it is: You can actually control the combination as your needs change over the years.

For instance you could invest in stocks for several years, for long-term growth. And then as you get closer to retirement, you might want to switch to a guaranteed interest rate.

And you can get your money out without paying a penalty.

When you eventually choose to withdraw it, you have to pay taxes on it at that time, of course. But this is what's most important. You pay tax on your money when you decide to pay it. This means later, when you're likely in a lower tax bracket.

This has led some to call this plan a tax shelter.

One fellow we know plans to pay into it for several years, watch it grow, then take it out to replace normal income while he lazes in Majorca.

But let's face it, the real benefit comes from leaving it in 'til you retire.

Moreover, we don't have a lot of salesmen out making calls, therefore you don't have to pay sales commissions.

This means, however, that you have to call us. Don't put it off. You can't deduct any deposits from your 1972 income after Thursday, March 1st, 1973.

If you're short of cash, talk to us about a low cost loan. The interest is deductible from your taxable income so you'll still save a bundle.

Make the rules work for you. Phone us now!

Product of Consultation?

A FEW DAYS BEFORE the opening of Premier David Barrett's first full legislative session, he talked informally for a couple of hours with the publisher, editor and business editor of The Province. One important point out of that conversation was this:

"In every one of the major announcements we will be making — and they are not going to be earth-shaking or super-dramatic or anything else, this is our first year in office and will be essentially a year of consolidation and understanding of where we are going — every decision will be the product of consultation."

We think Mr. Barrett has let the people of British Columbia down. It would be difficult to think of a more earth-shaking announcement than the one made last Thursday by Agriculture Minister David Stupich. Mr. Stupich introduced a bill which would create a five-man commission with wide powers to control land designated for agriculture, parks, greenbelts or recreational areas.

If the bill passes — and it will be passed if the government insists — the commission will be able to zone, buy, sell and hold land anywhere in the province. Local governments would be overridden in zoning. Land would not be considered to be devalued by being "frozen" — the owner could not obtain compensation for a loss in market worth.

Not many British Columbians will have a quarrel with the government acting quickly to save farmland. But the proposed method of doing so — and also of controlling land for other purposes — gives powers far too sweeping to a non-elected body, with little or no oppportunity for appeal.

Even if it is conceded that the election of the Barrett government was a victory and a mandate for the New Democrats rather than a rejection of Social Credit — and not everyone will make that concession — it must still be observed that the feeling before and after the election was that the NDP would stand for just treatment for all, and protection from arbitrary rule.

But the government proposes to establish a new bureaucracy with the ability to determine land use (and the fortunes of owners) in a completely arbitrary fashion, and with no roots in democracy. It is hard to believe that it is "the product of consultation" unless it is merely the product of consultation within the cabinet with the old-line socialists winning over the "social democrats" such as the premier claims himself to be.

Mr. Barrett, however, calls for calmness and rational discussion and says the government is prepared to accept good amendments. Perhaps there is time even in the current session of the legislature for wider consultation in the search for a more democratic and just way of saving land for its best use.

Battle of the Pipelines

IT IS JUST POSSIBLE that a reasonable and responsible alternative is now before the United States Congress for the solution of the complicated Alaskan oil transportation problem.

Senator Walter Mondale of Minnesota and Representative Les Aspin of Wisconsin have introduced a bill providing that crude oil from the Alaska North Slope wells should be piped through Canada to its U.S. destinations.

The Mondale-Aspin bill is in response to one introduced a week earlier by Alaska's two senators, Republican Ted Stevens and Democrat Mike Gravel. Their proposal is for construction of a 905-mile pipeline from the oilfields to Valdez, utilizing giant tankers to transport it from there to Cherry Point, Wash., through the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

They would attempt to sidestep a decision of a U.S. Court of Appeals that ruled against the all-Alaska pipeline on the grounds that the right-of-way requirement was in excess of the 54-foot limit set by federal law.

That may seem a trivial obstacle, and it would be were it not for the fact that environmentalists bitterly oppose the Alaskan route: the Americans chiefly on the grounds that it would destroy wildlife in the area through which it passes; the Canadians because of the inescapable risks involved in transporting crude from Valdez to Cherry Point through the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

What worries some Canadians is the thought that if the American environmentalists are correct in their assertion that a pipeline would be disastrous to a broad 900-mile strip of Alaska it would be every bit as dangerous to Canadian wildlife in the much longer corridor it would require — through the Mackenzie Basin and south to Edmonton.

On existing evidence the risk to the environment would be rather less if a pipeline were the ultimate vehicle rather than tankers.

That being the case — and unless some other significant calculations are introduced that would contradict it — the pipeline is the alternative Canadians, and particularly British Columbians, should support. No one needs further proof of what damage tanker spills can do or that they would be inevitable. And no one has yet complained of any great environmental impact in the areas through which present pipelines pass in Canada.

There is another aspect of the pipeline bill the Democratic congressmen have put before the legislators. It contains the argument, well documented, that the land route would make it possible to deliver oil at a saving of 40 cents a barrel.

This fact, appealing as it must to the consumer, big and small, might prove decisive.

"FORWARD MARX!"

India's Biggest Assault on Poverty

By WALTER SCHWARZ from New Delhi

Indian planners are launching the biggest assault on poverty in the country's history. It aims to give the necessities of life to 220 million people — 40 per cent of the population — who are known to live below accepted standards.

It exists only on paper yet. But the fifth Five-Year Plan, now in preparation, is the first Indian crash program for providing food, jobs, land and basic amenities for the staggering number of people who lack them. The 220 million now to be rescued are estimated to be living on incomes of less than $5.50 per head per month.

The plan will incorporate a "program of minimum needs" — at a cost of $4.4 billion. This aims to give a place in a primary school to every Indian child up to the age of 11, and to at least half of all children to the age of 14. At present only 70 per cent in the younger age group go to school and less than 35 per cent in the older group.

The "program" will also provide drinking water for the 150,000 villages which have no adequate source, and double the number of rural health centres, which now have to serve an average of 100,000 people each. It will use surplus land taken from owners in land reforms for housing landless laborers — the most abjectly poor group of all.

Is it practicable? The recent publication of the plan's outline has already been greeted with cynicism by economists and journalists who have seen the last four plans come and go while progress has been largely overtaken by the growth of population. Since the first plan was launched in 1950, the population has risen from 350 million to 570 million.

In that period food production has doubled, and India has become self-sufficient in most things, from bicycles to jet fighters. But owing to population growth and social inequalities, the number of the abjectly poor has risen steadily.

The fifth plan may have better results. It is the first to reject outright the theory that economic growth is enough to alleviate poverty because of its "trickling down" to the poor.

The attack on "growthmanship" was launched by Prime Minister Indira Gandhi a year ago when she told businessmen in Bombay that to rely on increased production and exports was to invite "social and political unrest" because it left out the poor.

Ironically, she was quoting — without acknowledgement — from a Pakistani economist working at the United Nations. But the new approach has now become official policy. The fifth plan, due to start next year, will be the first to devote as much resources to redistribution and social services as to increased production.

It will give a massive boost to existing programs for helping small farmers with irrigation, additional land and credit. A "crash program for rural development" will set up local development agencies, with the power and the money to guarantee jobs for all who want them.

In this drought year, with millions of people on the edge of starvation, the economy stagnant, prices rising at an unprecedented rate and foreign aid at a new low, hopes of higher standards seem remote. But these miseries themselves provide a spur to action, and Mrs. Gandhi is showing an uncomfortable sense of urgency. She has warned: "We do not have all the time in the world, nor are our people willing to wait. I think we must make a dent in the next three years or four at the very most."

Where the money comes from is the most controversial question. The plan's total outlay of $62 billion is twice as high as the previous plan. Yet it aims to make India completely independent of foreign aid by 1979. The ambitious target is actually to decrease the consumption of the top 30 per cent of the population by new taxes, enforced savings and import controls.

How this can be done without totalitarian compulsion remains to be seen. The Communist chief minister of Kerala, Achuta Menon, has already complained: "It is clear the planners have no intention of forcibly taking away the required amount of income from the richest 30 per cent of the population to raise the consumption of the poor. Policy decisions will be subject to stiff resistance by the 'haves' who still dominate the political scene."

But some of the reforms have already been set in motion, a year before the fifth plan is due to start. All the 18 Indian states have been ordered to enact land reform by the end of this year, and to nationalize the wholesale grain trade by next month. The Congress Party, which effectively governs India, is preparing to turn itself into a cadre-based party to generate reform "from below."

Judging by the open self-criticism of Indian leaders, the country is ripe for a cultural revolution, sweeping away vested interests from the party and the civil service, and depriving education of its "white collar" emphasis. (This last aim is actually incorporated in the fifth plan document, though it does not say how so sweeping a revolution can be made.)

"Garibi Hatao" (abolish poverty) was Mrs. Gandhi's slogan in the last election, two years ago. She now has a detailed blueprint to carry it through. But she will need both luck — in the shape of good monsoons — and courage to bring about the revolution that is needed.

Guns in the Closet

From The Toronto Star

One of the most significant statistics to emerge from the controversy over gun registration is the disclosure that of 2,674 people murdered in Canada between 1960 and 1970, nearly half — 44 per cent — were killed with firearms.

How many of these victims would be alive if Canada had had stricter laws governing the purchase and possession of guns?

No definite statistical answer is possible. But one of the other figures released by Statistics Canada shows that of the 1,178 shooting victims, 537 were slain by members of their own families.

This conjures up a picture of an embittered family row — perhaps fuelled by liquor — escalating to the point where someone resorts to violence. And then — the handy revolver in the drawer, or the rifle or shotgun in the closet — and what started as an argument ends in murder.

There is no doubt that in these circumstances an enraged man who has no gun available may find some other weapon — a carving knife, a hammer, a broken bottle. But none of these is intended for killied and they make clumsy unreliable instruments for the purpose.

A gun, however, is specifically designed to kill, and can do so with speed and efficiency. Anyone with a loaded gun in his hands — young or old, weak or strong, drunk or sober — has the power of life and death. A large proportion of those who died in domestic quarrels or drunken brawls would likely have survived if there had been no firearms on the scene.

Contributors to Voice of the People who have opposed stricter gun laws argue that whatever laws are passed, professional criminals will be able to get guns from illicit sources, and that therefore the number of murders committed by them will not diminish.

This may be true — but it should be remembered that the black market in firearms is largely supplied with weapons stolen from legitimate owners. We must also consider the large number of homicides committed, not by professional thugs but by normally peaceable people who temporarily lose control of themselves through anger or liquor. If the law was amended to eliminate the revolver in the drawer and reduce the number of rifles in the closet, these tragedies would be fewer.

Ottawa Offbeat

The Empire-Builders' Kingdom

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

"Outraged," as he said, at finding every third employee of Industry, Trade and Commerce making over $18,000, New Democratic MP Bill Knight of Assiniboia has been exploring what he calls "the golden kingdom of the empire-builders."

What upset him were two things:

1. Disclosure in the Commons by Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister Alastair Gillespie that 698 of his total 2,372 employees were doing better than $18,000.

2. Tales that are told of how, only three prime ministers and 16 years ago, Trade Minister C. D. Howe ran the department "out of his hat" with the executive help of the then deputy, Mitchell Sharp.

★ ★ ★

What had happened in the interval, wondered Mr. Knight, that the department should have moved from shabby, old, wooden warren No. 3 Temporary Building to a highrise tower in Place de Ville?

The rugs, perhaps, provide the sharpest clue.

Mr. Howe ran his shop out of a suite of three small offices, and only the inner sanctum, where the "Trader" himself presided as "minister of everything," as he was known by many, had a rug on the floor.

And it had a hole in it — the better, he used to tell curious visitors, to remind one and all that economy of operation was a good, perhaps the best, way of doing business.

Now in the department's highrise headquarters rugs are an expected and accepted way of working life. Everybody has one, and not a hole in sight.

Digging into the "empire" of ITC, Bill Knight found the departmental budget multiplied over those 16 Howe-to-Gillespie years from an annual $19 million to $271 million.

And look what's happened in the executive suite.

Where once "Trader" Howe, a deputy and a clutch of dollar-a-year men held over from the war years ran the department, now Mr. Gillespie has the assistance of 506 executives

★ ★ ★

Leafing through the departmental directory, Bill Knight sorted them out in this order of descending importance.

One deputy at $45,000 to $50,000.

Five assistant deputies at $34,000 to $45,000.

Twenty-nine directors general from $25,000 to $34,000.

Sixty-one directors from $25,000 to $31,000.

Four hundred and ten chiefs from $20,000 to $28,000.

Bill Knight says the salary figures are approximate, but "reasonably close on target."

He can't be precise with the exact executive bracket because the pay in each category is governed to some extent by length of service and efficiency, as well as by the gradings from juniors on up the scale to deputy minister at the third level.

Having done, for the time being, with Industry, Trade and Commerce, Bill Knight is now going after External Affairs, Manpower and Immigration, Justice and the prime minister's office.

He is asking for updated "now" figures from these departments, suspecting that in the two years since his NDP colleague, David Orlikow of Winnipeg North secured staff and salary statistics based on 1971 figures, there has been a further "astonishing" escalation.

Mr. Orlikow had discovered — from figures provided by the departments themselves to the Commons — that National Defence topped them all with "more chiefs than Indians."

★ ★ ★

Between '68 and '71, while the total establishment at Defence sbrank by 5.4 per cent, the number of senior top-pay people, military and civilian, swelled 209 per cent.

"Never," cracked Mr. Orlikow, "have so few been commanded by so many."

But that was two years ago, and Bill Knight suspects the spread has widened.

Other departments which in '71 had what Mr. Orlikow termed "disproportionate increases" in executive staffs were Statistics Canada up 154 per cent; Justice by 130 per cent; the Canadian International Development Agency (External's camouflaged name for its foreign aid division) 105 per cent; and the prime minister's office, 93 per cent.

What "outrages" both Mr. Orlikow and Bill Knight is not just the "fat-catism" of it all, as they term it, but the way the government, while pushing up executive salaries, sits on the pay lid of "the ordinary" public servant, many of whom are "close to or even below the poverty line."

Relations Darkening

Sino-Soviet Uneasiness

By NEAL ACHERSON from London

Relations between China and the Soviet Union, which seemed to be improving towards the end of last year, are darkening again.

In Moscow, there is increasing anxiety and exasperation at the steadily developing contacts between China and the outside world. U.S. presidential aide Henry Kissinger's latest visit to Peking, and his meeting with Chairman Mao, have made the Russians particularly nervous.

In part, this is because of the unexpected warming-up of the relationship between Japan and China. Soviet policy in the course of the last year or so has been to cultivate, with a haste born of acute unease, the present Japanese government, in order to delay any such reconciliation. Foreign Minister Gromyko visited Japan on the eve of President Nixon's visit to China.

This policy seems now to be breaking down. The Chinese have taken steps to conciliate the Japanese — the Japanese prime minister, Kakuei Tanaka, went to Peking and was painstakingly feasted and feted last year — while Soviet-Japanese relations have bogged down in the arguments over Japan's wish to regain four northerly islands annexed by the Russians at the end of the war.

As the Russians see it, Kissinger is cunningly orchestrating the harmony in eastern Asia. If Japan, the United States and China are all in accord with each other, this, in the Soviet view, will inevitably be based on a common hostility to the Soviet Union.

Soviet broadcasts have recently been devoting much time to denying reports by China and her new friends about a mounting Soviet military threat to the Chinese border. These reports are quoted as proof that Mao and his "clique" are really in league with the capitalists.

Recent rumors in London that Britain was contemplating selling 200 Harrier vertical take-off fighters to China brought a typical Moscow radio retort: "The Maoist leadership's foreign policy is in line with the objectives of British imperialism."

In general, the Soviet line is to deny a Soviet threat to China from the north, and to proclaim a threat to China from the south. The Americans still are the enemies of Chinese security, but the Maoists are too blind and opportunist to see it.

"In the Asian countries south of China," one such Russian broadcast in Chinese said, "there is a network of U.S. military bases which encircle China. In Laos and Cambodia, the flames of war whipped up by U.S. imperialism are still raging. The U.S.A. has long occupied Taiwan Island and there is no sign of withdrawal. The Japanese so-called "defence forces," which in fact reveal the revival of militarism, are already planning future military actions against China...."

This sort of appeal, aimed at the secret doubts of party men in China for whom the diplomatic scenery has changed too fast in the preceding year, is not going to cut much ice with the leadership. For the rest of the area, the Russians allege that China is not so much threatened as threatening. In a shrewd move last month, the Soviet press began to give much stronger support to the Indian case in the border dispute with China over the Himalayan frontier. And Russian captains have been taking considerable risks with unswept mines to get their cargoes into Haiphong harbor. This is another area of influence which the emerging American - Sino - Japanese partnership might take away from the Soviet Union.

The Chinese do not, in fact, seem to be interested in expansion. If the Russians still affect to regard them as an aggressive Asiatic horde waiting its moment to emulate Genghis Khan, the Chinese see only the vastly superior Soviet weaponry arrayed on their continental borders. They know that they are weaker: their interest in the Harrier fighter — and the interest, at least, is a fact — can be associated with their installation of medium-range nuclear missiles in hardened sites. This is "second strike capacity"; rockets which can hit back at the enemy after surviving a presumed first attack by the Soviet Union.

In the long term, the Chinese watch with misgivings the force reduction talks now getting under way at Vienna, which could eventually release many Soviet divisions from Europe for service along the Chinese frontier.

Against the bleak majesty of the Alps, morphine base smugglers leave Austria and encounter the drug defences of Germany at the Schwarzbach border checkpoint.

The morphine base distilled from opium gum in Turkey is on its way to Munich, 95 miles to the north, where it will sit in garages, in basements, warehouses and suburban villages, awaiting calls from the drug profiteers of France. About half the base that will be converted to heroin in the laboratories around Marseilles goes through Schwarzbach and Munich.

The price goes up along the route. In Istanbul, the morphine base sells for $350 a kilo (2.2 pounds); in Munich, $700 a kilo, and in Marseilles $1,100 a kilo. Converted to heroin, a kilo brings $240,000 on the streets of North America. All along the line, those in the heroin business are sharing the gigantic profits.

"You can see the customs police just whistling, tu-eeee, tu-eeee, and waving the cars through. How can they find drugs like that?" said the chief drug enforcement official for Bavaair, Judd Joachimski.

"Sometimes there are six lines of cars. We have an open border with Austria, because of the European Economic Community. We just can't find drugs coming across in private cars."

Customs is no better at intercepting the morphine base that is hidden in Transports Internationaux Routiers (TIR) trucks.

"Asking if TIR trucks carry morphine base through Germany is like asking if the sun rises in the east," an official of the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs (BNDD) in Munich told us.

★ ★ ★

"The smugglers are taking advantage of the built-in advantages of TIRs. Customs merely checks the seal to see if the load has been tampered with. If the seal is in order the truck is passed through.

"It is a tailor-made system for any type of smuggling . . . Customs officials are reluctant to break the seal (even though) they have a perfect right to do so," he said.

George Westinner, director of the Bavarian customs office, explained that his agents rely basically on advance knowledge.

"We only search thoroughly those trucks that we have information on. You can't imagine the difficulty. . . . From 40 to 50 TIR trucks move every day from Turkey across our border. Sometimes 200 trucks are lined up to go through. It is impossible to look at every truck."

★ ★ ★

Westinner acknowledged that "about 90 per cent of the morphine base that moves through the border is unknown to us."

The Germans have been more successful in stemming the flow of hashish, the narcotic resin of the cannabis plant, than morphine base at the border.

"The morphine base people are more qualified than some of the people wro move hashish," a Munich narcotics police source told us. "The pricme is much higher and the people who sell it are the upper class of smugglers."

The customs officials are sometimes persistent: one successful effort last year illustrates both their occasional diligence and the enormous difficulty and cost they face in trying to stop the flow of morphine base.

★ ★ ★

Last February, a TIR truck carrying paints and other chemicals from Istanbul was stopped as it passed through Schwarzbach. Customs officials had received information from BNDD that the truck was carrying morphine base.

During the inspection, the Turkish driver, Suleyman Ulukoglu, asked an agent if he could use the bathroom. Permission was granted. Ulukoglu went to the bathroom — and never returned.

The agents found no morphine base in the truck. The vehicle sat at Schwarzbach for several days until the owner sent another driver from Istanbul. Then it was reloaded and driven on to Munich.

★ ★ ★

But the Germans kept following the truck's movements and searched it four times in two weeks. The fourth time, in Munich, they found 93½ kilos (about 200 pounds) of base hidden in a compartment under the floor.

"It took eight people four hours to find it," a Munich drug enforcement official said. "It was well hidden."

The high-speed autobahn from Shwarzback to Munich cuts through the steep mountains of Bavaria. Entering the city limits, the road passes the spacious grounds of Olympic Village, the scene of last year's bloody summer games.

★ ★ ★

With a population of 1,400,000, Munich is the capital city of Upper Bavaria. The face is municipal, the buildings are old, but the mood of the city is increasingly influenced by the flood of Yugoslavian, Turkish and Asian factory workers. With them have come the small bands of morphine base smugglers.

The base is hidden in garages and in houses in villages surrounding the city. The small loads brought in by Turkish workers are also assembled and stored until the heroin dealers of Marseilles call for a large shipment.

The Turkish dealers may meet with the European contact in the bars or restaurants of Munich or they may fly someplace else in Europe. The deal could take place anywhere.

★ ★ ★

Germans and Americans agree on the importance of Munich on the heroin trail.

"Munich is the transfer point for morphine base," a spokesman for the city's narcotics police said. "It is a control station. Morphine base is unloaded here and about an equal share is stored and transferred on."

Morphine base also comes into Munich on the train from Istanbul, which arrives each day at noon. More than half a million Turks are employed in Germany, including 26,000 in Munich. An area near the railroad station, along Goethestrasse, is the principal Turkish section and the place where drug smugglers do most of their business.

★ ★ ★

Near Goethestrasse is the Maxburg Cafe, an establishment which we were told was frequented by Turkish smugglers who move morphine base through Munich. The office of Bavaria's chief drug prosecutor, Judd Joachimski, is in an adjacent building.

We asked Joachimski about the cafe. "Oh, yes," he said, "I've heard that drug smuggling deals are made at Maxburg." He then showed us a four-page document that listed 125 cafes, restaurants, bars and nightclubs in Munich where drug smuggling deals were made. Many in the Turkish section.

"Sure, I know where all of these places are where the deals are made," Joachimski said. But I haven't got the people to put in them and listen. We need people who speak Turkish, Arabic, Iranian. People who can go into the bars and hear what they are saying. We don't have such people."

With no Turkish-speaking agents, the Germans have been unable to penetrate the drug smuggling network.

BNDD has money available to buy up large amounts of morphine base, but it is limited in doing so because of German law.

★ ★ ★

"(The) . . . law forbids the buying of illegal drugs," a BNDD source told us. "It's the old agent provocateur position. The buyer is as guilty as the seller even if the buyer is a policeman."

While BNDD has concentrated exclusively on trying to impede the flow of morphine base and heroin, the Germans' primary target, and their area of greatest success, has been hashish.

In Bavaria, for example, 4,331 kilos of hashish were confiscated in 970, compared to 500 grams of morphine base and 490 grams of heroin. In 1971, Bavaria confiscated 6,669 kilos of hashish, 415 kilos of base and three kilos of heroin.

Like the Turks, the Germans consider heroin a North American problem. "Drugs here are a severe problem, but not . . . in terms of addicts," Wolfang Bouska, head of the Bavarian interior ministry drug committee, told us.

He said there were only 12 known German heroin addicts in Bavaria. Another source gave a figure of 25 for all of Germany.

★ ★ ★

Although Germany does not have a heroin problem, it does have a growing number of morphine addicts, an estimated 20,000 to 60,000 of them, fed by the morphine base passing through on the heroin trail. The Germans, consequently, are beginning to be more concerned about morphine base.

The German enforcement strategy is based on the assumption that the same smugglers are dealing in many drugs.

Joachimski elaborated. "I am glad to work with BNDD, but they only see the man with morphine base and heroin as a danger. I say that the man who sells hashish today will sell heroin tomorrow."

He might be right. The German police knew the names of 12 of the narcotic patrons we had identified in Turkey. The 12 were known in Munich as major suppliers of hashish.

In a previous instalment of The Heroin Trail (Colonist, Feb. 25) the Newsday team told the astonishing story of their drive across Europe, undertaken expressly to find what happens to heroin smugglers when caught. With a supply of powdered sugar, which resembles heroin in every way but taste, they drove through 10 border crossings without ever being searched or questioned. The plastic bags filled with "heroin" were first placed in suitcases in the trunk. Later, they were flung carelessly on the back seat. Finally, they were placed prominently on door of the glove compartment alongside the team's passports, as in this picture showing the approach to the checkpoint at Basel, Switzerland where, like everywhere else, the guards showed no interest.

Nixon-Kissinger Pattern of Diplomacy

Focus on Mideast

By JOSEPH HARSCH from Washington

Three days after a Libyan commercial airliner was shot down by Israeli planes and four days after Israelis had staged one of their deepest and boldest attacks on Palestinian regugee bases in Lebanon, Egypt's top diplomatic negotiator, Hafez Ismail, arrived in Washington and talked with President Nixon at the White House.

In other words, Washington does not accept the plane disaster as ruining its long and carefully planned new approach to a settlement in the Middle East.

★ ★ ★

That peace plan now is in full operation. The process formally opened earlier this month when King Hussein of Jordan was a White House guest in Washington. It took its second important step forward with the arrival of Ismail.

It is now in the third phase, with the arrival of Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir.

These are all preliminaries. At some point much farther along the road the Washington goal is a direct dialogue between Israelis and Egyptians.

Obviously that moment has at least been delayed and made difficult by the raids and the plane disaster. Time will have to soften the shock and pain to Egyptians and other Arabs before a direct dialogue would be conceivable between Egyptians and Israelis.

★ ★ ★

But, prudently, there is no rigid timetable in the American plan, any more than there was any rigid timetable in the Nixon-Kissinger approach to China. And time does smooth over the results of even the worst disasters.

Russian tanks rumbling into the streets of Prague ruined Lyndon Johnson's attempt to get a "detente" going with Moscow. But in due time President Nixon could pick up where those Russians tanks interrupted the diplomatic process. Nixon has achieved precisely what Johnson was prevented by those tanks from getting.

★ ★ ★

Whether an Egyptian-Israeli dialogue could begin while Mrs. Meir is still prime minister of Israel may be in question. Both Lyndon Johnson and his war in Asia had to go before another president could make the kind of peace Nixon is now making with both Peking and Moscow.

Mrs. Meir has been so successful as a war leader that she seems implausible as a leader towards peace. Perhaps she could make the transition. More plausibly, the march to peace will get seriously under way when there has been some preliminary cabinet reshuffling in Israel.

But there is time for that. Nixon's schedule has all along called for approaching peace in the Middle East through a series of steps.

First, Dr. Henry Kissinger had to finish with Vietnam in order to have time to take up the details of the Middle East problem. That involved the opening to China which alone took up about three years of effort to get started. It took another year from that to conclude the agreement with Hanoi.

Kissinger is now in a far better position to go to Moscow and start talking there about the Middle East. Just as the road to peace in Vietnam lay through Peking, so the road to peace in the Middle East lies through Moscow.

★ ★ ★

Every time Nixon draws closer to China Kissinger is more welcome in Moscow and his words are more intently noted.

Judging from past performance one would expect another Kissinger trip to Moscow sometime in the spring. And if out of that emerged a closer sense of common interest in a Middle East settlement — well, then, just perhaps, both Tel Aviv and Cairo might begin to see things differently.

The time is in fact over when Washington regarded Israel as its military front line against Russia in the Middle East. Russian influence there is now recessive. And the "detente" has moved forward.

The argument of Israeli indispensability to Washington has lost weight. The argument of better Arab relations for the sake of access to Arab oil has gained weight.

The net of it all is that in spite of the raids and the shooting of the plane there is still movement towards an ultimate settlement.

Battle of Sexes Shatters Trustees' Session

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

Monday night's meeting of the Saanich district school board broke up in a wild row with trustee Jack Armstrong accusing the three women members present of trying to dominate the two men.

The trouble grew out of Armstrong's attempt to gain approval of a resolution to the B.C. School Trustees Association convention calling for the banning in the future of teachers and paid school board personnel as members of school boards.

The women, chairman Rubymay Parrott and trustees Norma Sealey and Lois Walsh, termed the resolution completely unfair and refused to back it.

After a heated exchange that could be heard far from the meeting room, Armstrong slammed a handful of papers down on the table, withdrew the resolution and others he had been prepared to put forward and asked that his name be stricken from the various committees on which he serves.

Mrs. Parrott said she would be glad to comply. The meeting ended at this point on the recommendation of trustee Gordon Ewan.

Earlier in the meeting, Armstrong was defeated in a bid to have the board inform Education Minister Eileen Dailly that it opposed the "unilateral" action she had taken in legislating the strap out of existence.

Armstrong, who said he was not supporting corporal punishment but opposing the manner in which the strap was banned, drew his only support at the meeting from trustee Gordon Ewan.

There were also several strong exchanges between Mrs. Parrott and Armstrong on that subject.

Armstrong said Mrs. Dailly had a responsibility to consult school boards, parents and teachers before making such a decision but had simply acted on her own conscience.

Mrs. Parrott told Armstrong he was wrong when he said there had never been a parental complaint in the Saanich district concerning the use of the strap. He said he doubted her word.

Said Mrs. Parrott, "There is no way that I can agree with corporal punishment. I think if the education system has to resort to violence it is a pretty sorry state of affairs."

Referring to a poll in the Greater Victoria school district that he said showed 75 per cent of the parents in favor of retaining the strap, Armstrong said: "Do the schools belong to the parents or are we going to dictate what we want?"

Robber Grabs Bank Deposit

A man in his mid-20s wrestled a bag containing nearly $100 away from a Victoria service staton attendant as he was about to put it in a bank night deposit box Monday evening.

Donald Fenton, 46, of 4465 Blenkinsop, Saanich, closed the Quadra Gulf Service station at 980 Hillside and taking the evening's receipts — $98 in cash and $157 in cheques — in a bag across Quadra to deposit them in the night safe at the Royal Bank, 1006 Hillside.

Before he could put the bag into the safe he was attacked by a man who knocked him to the ground and took the bag away from him, police reported. The man fled in the direction of Fifth Street.

The suspect is described as 25 or 26 years old, five feet 10 inches tall, weighing 165 pounds, with dark brown hair, clean shaven and wearing blue jeans and a purple shirt.

Police said no weapon was seen in the robbery.

Press Responds Coolly

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen's efforts to help form a B.C. press council haven't been very successful.

The only enthusiastic response so far has come from the Media Club of Canada, formerly the Women's Press Club, Pollen said Monday. He will talk to the group in Vancouver on Friday.

"I've written letters to every daily newspaper in the province, but the response hasn't been very encouraging," he said.

Although he received some polite answers indicating that publishers would be willing to discuss the proposal with him, there was nothing to suggest that they might agree with him, the mayor said.

"The publishers working for the F.P. and Thompson chains banged their chests, saying 'We're free, we're free, we're free,' and at the bottom of the letter it said copy to J. Smith in Toronto, or something like it," he said.

Pollen repeated earlier statements that the public should have the opportunity to air its grievances regarding newspapers before some organization or body which would give fair hearings.

By DONALD FINLEY

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Leaders of organized labor have called for an excess profits tax and elimination of credit a part of the Phase III economic program.

"If equity is to be achieved during this current period of government restraint of wages, the soaring rise of corporate income must also be restrained," the AFL-CIO executive council said.

President Nixon so far has rejected suggestions for controls on profits and abolition of the investmen credit enacted in 1971 to spur economic recovery.

The labor counil, winding up its midwintr meeting today, said wag increases have fallen under the administration's economic controls, but profits ose 14 per cent in 1971, went up another 15 per cent in 1972 and were expected to rise an additional 15 to 17 per cent thisyear.

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government wil spend $1.7 million to build dikes around 700 acres of Indian land in the Chilliwack area, it was announced today.

A statement from Environment Minister Jack Davis and Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien said the Indian lands were not included in a 1968 diking agreement between the federal and B.C. governments.

Sheffield Studied

LONDON (CP) — Four Canadian environmental authorities discussed aspects of pollution control Monday with officials of Britain's environment department before setting out on a three-week study tour organized by the British government.

Their tour will take them from York in the north to Bristol in the southwest. They will see how industrial cities like Leeds and Sheffield are dealing with pollution, study Liverpool sewage outlet to the sea and environmental problems thrown up by Bristol's nuclear power plant.

The success of smoke-control polies in Sheffield, once a grim hub of northern industry has turned the famous city of cutlery into a magnet for environmental experts from abroad.

Brooding Giant

AFL-CIO Ready To Punch

By HAROLD MORRISON
CP Foreign Editor

The American labor movement appears to have turned into a brooding giant. And the fear in Canda and Europe is that the giant may suddenly throw a punch that can cause more than a few accidents to jobs and wages.

Strongly endorsing domestic trade protectionsim, the 13.5-million AFL-CIO also seems to be shunning world labor movements, including the new European Trade Union Federation (ETUF).

This new federation has its roots in the problems of workers trying to co-ordinate their efforts with expansion of the European Common Market.

What stung AFL-CIO president George Meany at the executive committee meeting at Bal Harbour, Fla., last week was acknowledgement by Vic Feather, secretary of the Trades Union Congress of Britain, that the Russians might also be invited to join.

This led to a public rebuke by the 78-year-old Meany who charged that the TUC had formed "a Moscow-London axis."

Feather tried to explain the situation in terms of Meany's age but more evident is the predominant American labor view that turmoil in Britain was brought to the boil by militant left-wingers probably more intent on destroying democracy than in seeking higher earnings.

The shift of American labor seems to be sharply to the right. Meany and his advisers see the left-wing element in many labor organizations abroad, including the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions ICFTU, headed by Donald MacDonald, president of the Canadian Labor Congress.

In a cruel crack against MacDonald, Meany described that organization, which has many links with the developing world, as "a useless body."

More recently the AFL-CIO spread the argument that cheap foreign labor, allowing low-priced products to flood the American market, is taking jobs away from American workers.

The fact that the AFL-CIO has branches and affilates in Canada and that major American companies have extensive investments in Canada may also have some bearing on the final application of American policies.

But as the AFL-CIO executive committee sessions have shown so far, the degree of influence the Canadian labor movement can exert on American union leaders and their protectionist aims seems to be marginal. When the giant starts moving, the little man would better not stand in his way.

Crunch on Credit Newest Concern

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock market prices slid lower again Monday and analysts pinned the blame on Wall Street's apprehensions over inflation and a possible credit crunch.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which lost almost 20 points last week, dropped 6.10 more to 953.79 and finished at the lowest closing point in almost four months.

Brokers said investors worrying over the prospect of inflation had suffered fresh jitters when the United States Federal Reserve Board approved an increase in discount rates over the weekend.

As banks across the country announced Monday they were increasing the prime rate of lending fee they charge their top corporate borrowers, to 6¼ per cent from 6 per cent, the stock market went into a tailspin.

The broad-based NYSE index of some 1,400 common stocks fell .53 to close at 60.29.

Golds Dive

TORONTO (CP) — Prices closed sharply lower in active trading with gold issues leading the decline. The gold index plunged 8.65 to 228.24, its largest one-day loss since July 9, 1972.

Analysts attributed the decline in gold stocks to a drop in the price of gold bullion on the London market. After reaching record highs of $90 following the devaluation of the United States dollar, gold was selling for $80.70 U.S. an ounce Monday, down $4.30 from Friday.

B.C. Forest increased ⅛ to $33 after its directors proposed a two-for-one stock split subject to shareholder approval April 19.

Teck Corp. A and B each fell five cents to $4.25 and $3.95, respectively, after reporting lower earnings for its fiscal year.

Husky Oil fell ¼ to $21¼, despite a report of record earnings for 1972.

All Losers

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were down in all sectors in moderate trading. On the Montreal Stock Exchange, Placer gained 2 to $56 and Quebec Telephone 1½ to $18½ while Shell Canada dropped 1⅝ to $52¾, Dale Ross 1½ to $7½ and Inglis 1½ to $21¾.

Prices Up

VANCOUVER — Prices rose in moderate trading. Hobough was a leader among industrials, rising 29 cents to $2.70. In the oils, Chapparal was up 5 cents at .40. Mines most active stock was Texal Development, down 1 cent at .64.

Taxes '72: Q & A

Q. On occasion fish is bought from boats where boat expenses are not known until the boat returns to home port. How should we as the buyer handle this situation?

A. Generally, before you can determine the insurable earnings and the premium deduction required for members of a crew, the declaration made to you as the buyer must include boat expenses. The Income Tax Deaprtment recognizes the problems created when the boat expenses are not available at the time the catch is sold and under these circumstances it is prepared to accept estimates of the boat expenses.

Q. My wife shares in the catch as a member of the crew. Can she be insured? I am also a crew member.

A. The wife of a fisherman is not insurable for a catch by a crew of which her husband is a member. The wife's share must be added to the husband's earnings for purposes of calculating his insurable earnings.

Q. What is the responsibility of the fish buyer where no declaration is made?

A. Under these circumstances the buyer has no responsibility. However, some other person will most likely be the "designated employer."

Q. I am a self-employed fisherman operating my own boat without help. Can I declare my actual expenses to the buyer of my fish or must he use the 25 per cent assumed operating costs?

A. The 25 per cent assumed operating costs must be used. Unemployment insurance regulations require that this amount must be deducted regardless of the actual operating costs.

Q. How are the insurable earnings determined of a fisherman's helper who is paid on a share-of-the-catch basis?

A. The fisherman must declare to the buyer the share arrangement. The actual monies paid to the helper in accordance ith the share arrangement is the amount on which a premium of unemployment insurance is required, subject to the minimum and maximum insurable earnings for the pay period. (i.e. weekly — $30.00 minimum, $150.00 maximum.)

Evening Answers

Southern Vancouver Island residents having trouble with their new income tax forms will be able to get extra telephone help two evenings a week, it was announced Monday.

The Victoria tax office is one of a number across Canada which Ottawa said will have staff at their telephones each Monday and Tuesday until 8 p.m. from now to April 30, deadline date for filing income tax returns.

Other days the service will continue on regular hours, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Evening hours, said the Ottawa announcement, will allow queries by persons who cannot telephone during their working day.

Experience shows that most of such calls come early in the week from people who ran into a problem with the tax form during the weekend.

Royalties Protest Heard

Peace River Study Launched

An economic officer of the provincial department of industrial development is to be sent to the Peace River region to assess the effects of the government's proposal to double oil and gas royalties.

This was announced following an 80-minute meeting between Premier Dave Barrett and a delegation of three from the area, headed by Mayor Peter Frankiw off Fort St. John.

The mayor said John McKeown, manager of the Vancouver office of the Department of Industrial Development, Trade and Commerce, will arrive in the town Friday to start a two-to-four-week study of the effects, and also the possibility of establishing several secondary industries.

Frankiw, accompanied by Beth Todrick, chairman of the town's school board, and Tony Brummet, poresident of the Peace River Chamber of Commerce, said the meeting went "very well" and he said he was "very happy" with the reception he got from the premier, Mines Minister Leo Nimsick and Atttorney-General Alex Macdonald, who also holds the trade portfolio.

The delegation presented the premier with a 15-page brief outlining the importance of the petroleum business the economy of the Peace River region.

It said a "chain economic situation" is involved and if the oil industry withdrew from the region, it would "place a great majority of our people ot of work . . ."

It urged the government to "negotiate and reconsider its policy" and recommended that British Columbia not increase royalties much higher than in Alberta.

Gold Slips

LONDON (Reuter) — The London bullion market lowered the price of gold by $4.30 U.S. an ounce Monday as reports came in from European currency centres that the dollar was making a slight recovery.

Gold dealers here started the day by quoting $83 an ounce for bullion — $2 lower than Friday. Before the close they had clipped off another $2.30, taking the rate down to $80.30 an ounce.

Dealers said the dollar was benefititng from a Washington announcement that The United States trade deficit in January was more than $100 million lower than in December.

In Paris, the dollar strengthened in moderate trading Monday, while gold prices dropped in commercial dealings on France's two-tier exchange market. On the foreign market, the dollar closed at 4.58 to 4.59 compared to 4.55 to 4.57 francs Friday.

The 12.5 kilos gold bar was quoted in Paris at the equivalent of $80.86 an ounce — $3 below the Friday level.

B.C. Wells Disclosed

CALGARY (CP) — Canadian Reserve Oil and Gas Ltd., and Quintana Exploration Co., have announced two gas discoveries in northeastern B.C.

A discovery well, B-43-J, was reported in the Kotcho area 56 miles east of Fort Nelson which tested an open flow of 21 million cubic feet a day. Total thickness of the productive reef formation was not determined since drilling was suspended after penetrating 33 feet of reef porosity.

Another well was being drilled below 6,500 feet on a separate structure four miles south of the discovery well.

The second reported discovery is in the Tenaka area, 48 miles south of Fort Nelson. Adsett A-36-G was completed in August, 1972, and tested a calculated open flow of 7.4 million cubic feet a day.

Biggest Refinery To Start

ST. JOHN'S (UPI) — Newfoundland Premier Frank Moores announced Monday construction will begin this summer on the largest oil refinery in Canada at Come-by-Chance, Nfld.

Moores said agreement on the project had been reached with New York oil promoter John Shaheen Natural Resources of New York.

Premier Moores said construction of the 300,000 barrel-a-day refinery would begin this summer and it is expected to be completed in 1976.

Canadian Route, Cheaper Oil Keys to Bill

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Oil from the untapped wells on the Alaska North Slope would have to be piped into the United States through Canada under legislation introduced Monday by two midwestern Democratic congressmen.

Senator Walter Mondale of Minnesota and Representative Les Aspin of Wisconsin said use of the Canadian route could reduce by nearly 40 cents a barrel the price of crude oil in the east and midwest, as well as avoid the damage to the environment that a trans-Alaskan pipeline would cause.

A spokesman for Aspin said the pipeline would take the most direct feasible route from Prudhoe Bay, on the Alaska North Slope, to the Canadian border. It would go south to Edmonton, probably along the Mackenzie River Valley, and then join existing Canadian pipelines to the U.S. border.

Environmentalists oppose construction of a Trans-Alaska pipeline from Prudence Bay to Valdez, Alaska's southern port, on the grounds it would irrevocably harm Alaska's natural wildlife.

A U.S. court of appeals recently ruled against any Alaska pipeline construction on the grounds that the needed right-of-way far exceeded the 54-foot width limit set by U.S. federal law.

The Mondale-Aspin bill would grant a waiver of that provision, but only if the pipeline goes into Canada.

Alaska's two senators — Republican Ted Stevens and Democrat Mike Gravel — introduced legislation last week that would permit construction of an 800-mile pipeline from Prudhoe Bay to Valdez.

Mondale and Aspin criticized their proposal, arguing that the oil companies would seek the all-Alaska route in order to "keep midwestern and eastern fuel prices high and jack them up higher when oil supplies run low in the future."

They said a trans-Canada route could reduce crude fuel oil prices in the midwest from $3.79 a barrel to $3.40 a barrel.

Educator Appointed Commissions' Chief

Mrs. Dailly
. . . confident

Internationally-known educator John Bremer has been appointed chairman of the B.C. government's two commissions on education, Education Minister Eileen Dailly announced Monday.

Bremer, now Killam senior fellow at Dalhousie University, Halifax, will chair both a commission on public schools and one on post-secondary education in B.C.

The commissions, which will report directly to Mrs. Dailly, are expected to travel around the province hearing representations from interested groups and citizens on all aspects of education, including philosophy and financing.

Mrs. Dailly said Monday that other commission members will be announced very shortly. With the exception of Bremer, different people will serve on the two commissions.

Bremer has been involved in education since 1946 when he taught in a one-room school and for the past few years has been involved in a number of experimental education programs.

An Englishman by birth, he taught from 1962 to 1966 at the University of Leicester in the graduate school of education, working in developing new methods of teacher-training.

He also served as a superintendent in an experimentally decentralized school district in New York City, and created an innovative program in Philadelphia described as "the original school without walls."

He has written numerous articles and two books about education, with three further books appearing later this year.

"I am confident that with John Bremer's proven success as an innovative education he will give excellent leadership to the commissions," said Mrs. Dailly.

Barrett Wants Study On Passenger Service

Premier Dave Barrett said Monday he has asked officials of B.C. Railway to examine the passenger service aboard the government-owned rail line.

"The passenger service has been very poor in the past," said Barrett, as BCR president.

The premier said he would also like to see the tourist potential of the railway developed. He said he would like to see the BCR be not just an industrial line but one catering to passengers and tourists as well.

Northern Linkup

Federal Rail Aid Eyed

Barrett
. . . talks proceed

B.C. is seeking a lump-sum payment of up to $27 million from Ottawa before completing any arrangements for a northern linkup between B.C. Railway and Canadian National lines, Premier Barrett told the Legislature Monday.

Barrett was answering questions in the Legislature during the debate on the $156,166 salary vote for the premier's office. In the opening stages of debate he dealt extensively with the question of West Coast port development and rail links but produced little new information.

The premier told the house there are economic considerations which favor the choice of a Howe Sound port, probably Britannia, over Prince Rupert as the site of a loading facility for Sekunka coal. Large shipments of this coal, taken from rich deposits near Chetwynd, are slated for the British market, a valuable alternate to present markets in Japan.

The premier also said that while there is no conclusive evidence in federal reports that any area adjacent to Prince Rupert is safe from ecological hazards as a site for a coal port, the initial provincial report on Britannia has indicated there would be no ecological damage there.

The "integrated railway facility" being negotiated with the federal government involves a connection between the CN mainline from Prince George to Prince Rupert, probably at Hazelton, and the new northward thrust of B.C. Railway from Fort St. James to Dease Lake. The new link would allow uptapped resources from the northwestern section of the province to be shipped through Prince Rupert.

Barrett said he agreed with the former Social Credit administration that Ottawa should pay to the province in a lump sum the subsidies which should have been given to B.C. for new construction in the past several years. He added this amounted to between $19 million and $27 million.

"There's no reason why other provinces should get cash payments from Ottawa for their railways or ferries for that matter and we should get nothing," the premier said. He added talks on this issue were proceeding in a "good atmosphere."

In reply to further questions on port development from Liberal leader David Anderson, Barrett said that the matter was "not an either-or situation." There were many ways Prince Rupert could be developed as a port without using it to ship coal from, he said.

And he emphasized that no ecological studies had yet been done at Prince Rupert which would prove it safe as a coal port. "The ecology is just as important in Prince Rupert as in the Lower Mainland," he said, noting that ecological studies had already been done which proved Britannia to be a safe site.

If Britannia was developed as a coal port, it would be built by the government as both an industrial and a recreational site, he said.

Anderson had quoted statistics from a transportation economist which he claimed proved it would be more economic for Sekunka coal to be moved from its fields to a port at Prince Rupert rather than one on Howe Sound.

This was true, he said, when all factors were taken into consideration — not just distance, but also capital costs, grades, and curves on the railways involved — the CNR going to Prince Rupert, the British Columbia Railway to Howe Sound.

Barrett replied, however, that he didn't think the B.C. taxpayer should have to subsidize the federal railway (the CNR) by using its facilities when the federal government gave no help to the province in the building or upkeep of the B.C. Railway.

Socred Predicts B.C.'s Collapse

Premier Barrett must immediately "do something to save this province from complete economic collapse," Don Phillips (SC—South Peace River) said Monday in the Legislature.

Speaking in debate on the premier's salary estimates, he said that, with unemployment figures rising rapidly, B.C. could soon be in a worse condition than in the 1930s with businesses going broke "and everybody on the soup-lines."

He urged Barrett to meet with executives in the mining, oil and forest industries and to plan government policies that would allow for expan- he termed "union rip-offs" with large amounts of dues paid by Canadian union members going to U.S. international unions.

Barrett said in reply later in the debate that the government had allotted $80 million from surplus funds in its budget to job creating programs such as the Accelerated Park Development Fund, but the Socreds had voted against that budget.

Natural Gas Pipeline Still in Air

Premier Barrett said Monday the provincial government has still made no decision regarding the construction of a natural gas pipeline from the B.C. mainland to Vancouver Island.

Frank Richter (SC — Boundary-Similkameen) had asked the premier whether the government had taken any action since the Public Utility Commission hearings on the matter ended in August.

Five companies, including B.C. Hydro and Power had made bids on the pipeline which, under the original plans, was to run from Williams Lake to Powell River and then over to Vancouver Island.

Brazil Censors Force Revision

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Federal censors forced the evening newspaper Jornal da Tarde to revise its editorial page to remove a critical commentary on press censorship and poor working conditions in northeast Brazil.

The editorial implied that President Emilio G. Medici would not allow press censorship to continue if he realized the importance of the press "mission" to reveal flaws in Brazilian society.

Money, Safe Missing

When the staff of a Royal Canadian Legion branch in Langford went to check the weekend receipts after arriving for work Monday morning, they not only found no receipts but also the safe containing the receipts had also gone.

Colwood RCMP said about $1,500 was lost when thieves carried the small, grey safe out of the Legion's Prince Edward branch office, 761 Station, between 1 p.m. Sunday and 8 a.m. Monday.

Police said two cartons of liquor and about 20 cartons of cigarettes were carried to a rear door of the Legion branch but were left there, possibly as the thieves decided on a quick getaway.

Two thefts in Victoria were of lesser size but equally interesting.

Victoria police said someone broke into a bird cage at Beacon Hill Park overnight Friday but it was not known if anything flew the coop. And a thief some time last week took from the Sports World shop, 1616 Hillside, one $150 size 10 ski boot, blue with red trim.

Only the left boot was taken.

The man, Alphonse Alexander Plessis of 314 Goldstream, had been found guilty Friday by a jury on a two-count Colwood RCMP charge of robbery with threat of violence and theft of a car.

Testimony during the trial was that Plessis, a recent arrival in the Victoria area, walked into the Devonshire Grocery, 808 Goldstream, at about the 9:30 p.m. closing time Dec. 4 and asked for milk and eggs.

Storekeeper Mrs. Rose Cardy pointed them out to him and he brought them to the counter, where she stood at the open till, which contained more than $300 in bills.

A 28-year-old Victoria man can thank his wife and three young children for the fact he can serve the 21-day jail term set for him Monday in Victoria Provincial Court on Weekends in the Victoria jail.

The man, Gary Raymond Baker of 1905 Richardson, pleaded guilty to a two-count Victoria charge of impaired driving and failing to remain at the scene of a minor accident Sunday and was sentenced by Judge William Ostler to a total of 21 days in jail.

A court officer took Baker to the Victoria jail next to court but Ostler had Baker brought back. He asked about his family and whether Baker could "arrange for leave or lose your job."

Baker, who said he worked Monday through Friday, replied: "I don't know what's going to happen."

Ostler ordered that the 21 days be served within a year and told Baker to report to the jail at 8 a.m. Saturdays and stay until 8 p.m. Sundays until the time is completed. He also put Baker on probation for one year.

"I do that not out of sympathy for you, because you really don't deserve it, but I do it for your wife and children," said the judge. "It does seem a shame to penalize your wife and your family for this sort of anti-social conduct."

Such weekend sentences were allowed under a change in the Canadian Criminal Code last year but are rarely put into effect in Victoria.

Trafficker Gets Six Years

A trafficker in methadone who was caught with the drug twice within three hours last June was sentenced Monday in Victoria County Court by Judge M. L. T. Drake to six years in prison.

James Ferguson Russell, 25, address not known, had been convicted Feb. 16 by a jury following a trial on a two-count charge of possession of methadone for the purpose of trafficking.

Testimony showed he had 100 tablets of methadone, a drug used as a substitute for heroin during withdrawal treatment, and a bottle about half full of crystal powder when he was arrested at his residence at 11 p.m. June 13.

He was charged at Victoria police headquarters and released. Police placed his apartment under surveillance and Russell was arrested again at about 2 a.m. June 14 when police found he had another half-filled bottle of crystal powder.

Drake referred to evidence that Russell told police he had bought seven bottles of methadone from one source between May 31, 1972, and his arrest, and had been selling capsules for 50 cents more than the dollar he paid.

In the same court, Robin John Van Hecke, 20, of 525 Sumas, was remanded to March 13 for a pre-sentence report and sentence after pleading guilty to a charge of trafficking in hashish last July 21 and possession of hashish Oct. 16.

The possession count referred to a small amount found on Van Hecke after he was arrested just outside Victoria Provincial Court. He had been listening to cases involving undercover RCMP agent Blaine Froats.

The trafficking charge referred to two grams of hashish which Van Hecke sold to Froats for $10 in a Victoria hotel.

'Incredibly Stupid' Holdup Man Jailed

"Incredible ineptitude and stupidity" were the words used Monday in Victoria County Court by Judge M. L. T. Drake to describe the case of a 38-year-old man whom he sentenced to a total of two years less a day — the maximum term in a provincial jail.

Testimony during the trial was that Plessis, a recent arrival in the Victoria area, walked into the Devonshire Grocery, 808 Goldstream, at about the 9:30 p.m. closing time Dec. 4 and asked for milk and eggs.

Storekeeper Mrs. Rose Cardy pointed them out to him and he brought them to the counter, where she stood at the open till, which contained more than $300 in bills.

Plessis said, "This is a holdup. Put all your 10s and 20s in the bag or I'll blow your head off."

Mrs. Cardy did not move so Plessis handed her a note that read: "This is a holdup, baby. I have a .45 Colt. Put all 50s and 20s in the bag."

The storekeeper said, "No," and Plessis, showing signs of surprise, thought for a while and then said: "I've got a gun in my pocket. It's pointed at you. I'll shoot."

He had one hand in a pocket but Mrs. Cardy said: "Go ahead and shoot. You're not getting any."

Again Plessis thought about it and then said: "Give me $20. Your life must be worth $20."

Mrs. Cardy gave him two $10 bills from the till and he began to leave. As he neared the door, she said, "You can just put those down." meaning the milk and eggs. He walked back to the counter, put them down and left.

When police stopped him soon after, they found he was in a car stolen shortly before the holdup from a service station across the street from the Colwood RCMP office, 301 Goldstream. After the holdup, he drove it into Victoria where he bought nearly $20 worth of liquor.

Mother Feared Wolves, Girl Dies After Fall

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two-year-old Elizabeth Paul of Lytton, B.C., died in Vancouver General Hospital Sunday of injuries suffered in a fall at her family home last Tuesday.

Vancouver city police said Sunday the girl's mother told them she could not get her child to a doctor in Lytton immediately because she feared an attack by wolves.

Eunice Paul said Elizabeth fell down some stairs at the home six miles outside of Lytton and lapsed into unconsciousness. But she was kept at home overnight because the family had no means of transportation and it was dangerous to leave the house on foot as wolves were prevalent in the area, Mrs. Paul told Vancouver police.

An RCMP officer in Lytton said Sunday night he had not heard any reports of wolves in the south central British Columbia area. He said there were some coyotes but they are not a menace to people.

Nixon Scratching Labor's Back?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration said Monday it will retain the 5.5-per-cent guideline for wages increases during Phase 3. But it signalled some loosening of the pay standard.

Confusion cloaked the major economic policy announcements.

President Nixon's chief economic spokesman said Phase 2's basic wage standard would remain in effect. At the same time, the administration embraced a broadly worded policy statement which skirted any mention of the 5.5-per-cent standard.

The statement said "no single standard or settlement can be equally applicable at one time to all parties in an economy so large, decentralized and dynamic."

Public and private statements of administration officials indicated the move was an attempt to win labor's backing for Nixon's revamped economic program. AFL-CIO President George Meany has opposed the 5.5-per-cent standard as too low.

Nixon announced last month that he was ending Phase 2's mandatory wage-price controls for all but the food, health and construction industries.

Regina Apartment Fire Kills Nine

REGINA (CP) — The death toll in an apartment fire Sunday night that took nine lives and injured 18, could have been higher had it not been for quick action by a patrol constable and two young civilians.

Insp. Bob Connell said Constable Keith Ball, who turned in the alarm about 10:40 p.m., and two young men rushed into the building and helped some of the 54 residents out through dense smoke.

"I'm sure they probably saved some lives," said Insp. Connell, whose son Lance was one of the passers-by who aided in the rescues.

"When the firemen got there they were working on the upper floors."

Seven of the dead were identified but police withheld the names.

The inspector said it was believed that none of the injured was critically hurt.

White House Bugged Reporters' Phones—Time

UPI

The Nixon administration, concerned over possible leaks to the press, ordered the FBI to tap the phones of suspected newsmen and White House aides, Time magazine reported Sunday.

Time said in its current edition that four separate government sources revealed an eavesdropping plan that began about three years ago under J. Edgar Hoover and continued when L. Patrick Gray became acting director of the FBI.

No leaks were uncovered, the magazine said. The campaign was dropped, the account said, only after the supreme court last june overruled Attorney-General John Mitchell's wiretap policies.

The magazine said the campaign was initiated against one newsman but later was expanded to six or seven, plus an undisclosed number of White House aides.

Hoover reportedly balked at the order but complied after receiving authorization from Mitchell, then the attorney-general, who sanctioned the surveillance on the grounds of domestic security, thus eliminating the need for a court order for the taps.

Meanwhile, the Nixon administration came under fire for its policies towards the media from other quarters in the U.S.

Veteran newscaster Walter Cronkite said continued attacks on the media by the Nixon administration have served to drag down the credibility of the press and put American liberties in danger.

Speaking at the convention of the American Association of School Administrators here Sunday, the CBS newsman said "It is not too hard to believe that, indeed, that may have been one of the aims of the clever managers of this anti-press campaign.

"It is regretable that this administration, in attempting to raise its own credibility by dragging down that of the press, has so politicized the issue of the press' performance that rational discussion is difficult."

Canadian Skaters Earning Support

BRATISLAVA (CP) — "I'd put my money on the Canadians any day," said one veteran Czech skater as he watched Canadian champion Toller Cranston practising.

"Look at him," the Czech added. "His style and approach is perfect. He will be untouchable in the championships."

After a week's acclimatization in Vienna to adapt to the European time and diet change, the Canadian contingent arrived in high spirits in this sprawling Slovak capital.

As they started to swing into their practice sessions, several Canadians won the hearts of the handful off Czech spectators. With entries from some 22 countries, the skating gets underway today after the formal opening Monday night.

During the Sunday rehearsals, Toronto-born Cranston demonstrated some of the masterly control which placed him second in last year's championships. The bustling rink suddenly came to a standstill as he went through his unique freeskating routine.

"There's no one in the world who can skate like that," Canadian team-manager Charlie Dover said as Cranston hurled himself around the rink.

Top contender for the ladies' individual title, Karen Magnussen of Vancouver, also has been turning in impressive performances during rehearsals.

With Austrian supremo Beatric Schuba now on he professional circuit, experts here feel the ladies title will go either to Karen or U.S. champion Janet Lynn. Dover says it will be one hell of a tight competition between the two girls.

T-Birds Extend Vikings' Skein

VANCOUVER (CP) — University of Victoria Vikings have suffered their 52nd consecutive Canada West University Athletic Association men's hockey defeat, an 8-1 whipping at the hands of the University of British Columbia Thunderbirds.

Rich Lonpre had two goals and Jim Lawrence, Bill Cartwright, Bob Murray, Alec Dick, Doug Buchanan and Brian DeBiasio added single goals for the Thunderbirds. Jack Richardson scored in the second period to spoil Rob Smith's shutout bid.

UBC outshot Victoria, 54-26.

The Vikings won their last game in January of 1971, their first year in the league. They were winless in the last two seasons.

Rams Discuss Gabriel Trade

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Preliminary discussions have been held toward granting the wish of Los Angeles Rams quarterback Roman Gabriel — a trade to the National Football Conference champion Washington Redskins.

Gabriel's attorney, Ed Masry, who conveyed the wish to the Rams, said the 6-foot-4 veteran quarterback wanted "to be reunited" with George Allen who headed the Rams' coaching staff five years until 1971.

Don Klosterman, assistant to Rams' owner Carroll Rosenbloom, confirmed he had talked with Allen on the possibility of trading Gabriel.

Gabriel said he was aware of the preliminary negotiations and hoped something could be worked out.

Hawks Trade for Backstrom

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Black Hawks acquired veteran centre Ralph Backstrom from Los Angeles Kings in exchange for left-wing Dan Maloney in a National Hockey League trade Sunday night.

Backstrom, 35, had 20 goals and 28 assists for the Kings in his 16th NHL season. He starred for 13 years with Montreal before being traded to the Kings in 1970. He has a career total of 272 goals.

Maloney, 22, had 13 goals and 17 assists for the Hawks.

"We have been looking for a centre all year," said Tommy Ivan, general manager of the Black Hawks, "and our situation has become desperate."

The Hawks lost Stan Mikita, their top centre, two weeks ago with a broken bone in his left heel. He is expected to be out of action for at least two more weeks.

Baseball Pact Applauded, Peace at Hand

By The Associated Press

Baseball's ceasefire ended Monday at spring training camps where major-league club owners and players overwhelmingly applauded their three-season labor agreement.

Clearly, peace was at hand.

Player representatives from the 24 teams were scheduled to meet Wednesday in Miami for an in-depth look at the agreement with Marvin Miller, their lawyer and chief negotiator.

American and National league offices were canvassing the owners and hardly heard a discouraging word. One source said it was a "sure thing" that the contract would be approved.

Meanwhile, activity whirred at training sites in Florida, Arizona and California. Some teams had been delayed as much as 13 days in starting operations.

It was a happy scene and nobody was happier than New York Mets pitching ace Tom Seaver. He had just signed to work the 1973 season for a reported $150,000.

"It's a fine agreement," Miller said. "I think there is a strong chance for approval. The player reps will make a recommendation and then take copies for their teammates."

Salary arbitration was a powerful section, allowing major leaguers with two or more years' experience to take their money disputes to a third party for settlement.

Neither Miller nor his counterpart from the owners' side, John Gaherin, would disclose any portion of the agreement which they reached Sunday.

However, it was learned that a minimum salary of $15,000 for major-league players was approved. That's up more than 100 per cent over the $7,000 bottom limit in 1967.

Player salaries may not be sliced by more than 20 per cent after poor performances, compared to 25 in the past. They may only be cut 30 per cent over a two-year period, instead of 44.

If a player is released during spring training he will receive a month's pay. Previously, he got nothing. If he's cut between the season opener April 6 and May 15, he gets two months' cash rather than one. After May 15, he will get full season's pay instead of the old 30 days' pay.

Miller said he would visit each major-league camp for explanation of the contract and that only a "full vote of players can make acceptance official."

However, if the player reps strongly endorse the deal as expected, the full vote becomes a formality that simply must be completed before the old contract expires March 31.

City Player Retains B.C. Shuttle Title

VANCOUVER — Liz-Anne Ogden of Victoria won her third consecutive B.C. junior badminton championship on Sunday and shared another provincial title.

Miss Ogden retained the singles crown with a 12-10, 5-11, 12-9 win over Kathy Henry of Vancouver and then partnered her opponent to a 15-4, 15-0 win over Victorians Julie Hosie and Brenda Cameron in the women's doubles final.

Miss Henry and Ron Chen of Richmond won the mixed doubles event with a 15-5, 15-6 decision against Diana Marion of the University of Victoria and Alan Smith of White Rock.

Ben Moxom of Vancouver won the men's singles and shared the doubles crown with Bruce Gandossi, also from Vancouver.

Nanaimo Quartet Tops First Two Opponents

By LARRY ROSE

CHARLOTTETOWN — An upset victory over Quebec and an uncomfortably close win over New Brunswick gave British Columbia, represented by Karin Kaese of Nanaimo, a share of the lead as the Canadian Ladies Curling Championship opened here Monday.

Mrs. Kaese and her rink of third Shannon Blackburn, second Loretta Ahlstrom and lead Donna Dunn made their debut in national play an impressive one.

In the opening round of the Macdonald Lassie, B.C. stole four on the eighth end to snap a 4-4 tie and set up an 8-5 win over the favored Quebec entry skipped by Montreal's Lee Tobin.

B.C. ran its record to 2-0 in the evening draw with an 11-8 win over New Brunswick, represented by Sheila McLeod of Fredericton.

It left the Nanaimo rink sharing the lead with defending-champion Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Prince Edward Island entering this afternoon's third round. The fourth round is scheduled tonight with three draws Wednesday and the final two rounds set for Thursday.

"The win over Quebec helped us a lot," said Mrs. Kaese.

"We didn't really know what to expect before that game, but now we feel we can hold our own."

Today, she faces a tough test against Manitoba, and then plays Prince Edward Island on the evening draw.

Against Quebec, B.C. trailed, 4-2, after six ends but tied it on the seventh. Mrs. Tobin, who handed Saskatchewan its only loss last year, was light with last rock on the eighth end and the Nanaimo rink stole four.

Mrs. Tobin needed only half of the eight-foot ring to count but she misjudged the weight needed on the heavy and swingy ice. After getting one back on the ninth, she was quickly run out of rocks on the final end.

Against New Brunswick, Mrs. Kaese drew for two with last rock on the fifth end to go ahead by 5-4. The B.C. rink upped its lead to 9-4 by stealing two on each of the sixth and seventh ends with Mrs. McLeod was short of the house each time while facing open draws.

Mrs. McLeod cut the lead to 9-6 with two on the eighth and then closed it to 9-8 by stealing two on the ninth end. The New Brunswick skip would have counted only one on the ninth except that Mrs. Ahlstrom broomed a rock and for a while it looked as if the slip might prove costly.

But Mrs. Ahlstrom made up for it on the 10th end with a fine takeout and Mrs. Blackburn made a long raise takeout for the rink's best shot of the day to leave B.C. counting one with skips' rocks to come.

Armstrong Accomplishes Rarity

NEW WESTMINSTER — Two youthful former schoolboy champions have pulled off a curling rarity — the chance to win two Canadian championships in the same season.

Former-Victorian Jim Armstrong and Gerry Peckham, who won his schoolboy championship when he was at Prince George, combined Sunday to win the B.C. mixed-rink championship by defeating Jack Tucker twice.

That qualified Armstrong's Richmond rink, which also includes Marion Chamberlain as vice-skip and Leslie Clark as lead, for the national final in Charlottetown starting March 25.

But before they head for the east coast, Armstrong and Peckham have a date in Edmonton, where the Canadian men's championship starts on March 5. There they will be playing for Tucker, whose youthful front end helped him win the right to represent B.C. in the Canadian men's final.

"I just hope it doesn't upset Jack for the Brier, "the 22-year-old Armstrong said after his comeback Sunday, which ended with an 11-2 triumph in a playoff game which lasted only five ends.

Armstrong won the "B" side final of the eight-rink double-knockout competition when he made his last rock for a 10-9 decision in a Sunday morning game.

Tucker, who had won the "A" side on Saturday, had a second chance, but there was no stopping the youngsters. They stole three on the fourth end to take a 6-2 lead, and Tucker shook hands when Armstrong stole five on the fifth end.

Scoring Star Injured In Vic-West Victory

Victory could have been very costly for Victoria West-United on Sunday.

The Victoria squad edged Vancouver Sporting Club, 2-1, to snap a first-place deadlock in the Pacific Coast Soccer League. But Vic-West lost the services of the leading scorer in the PCSL when striker George Pakos was taken from the field after re-injuring an ankle.

Pakos, who has 10 goals this season, took a bad tumble on the artificial turf at Vancouver's Empire Stadium and aggravated a ligament injury suffered at a December practice session.

Coach Ron Thompson has excused Pakos from practices this week and hopes the striker will be fit enough to play Saturday, when West-United clash with rival Victoria Gorge Molsons at Royal Athletic Park.

The win moved West-United two points ahead of Gorge and New Westminster Blues, who edged Paul's Tailors, 4-3, in a Sunday match at Queen's Park Stadium.

In the only other game, Vancouver Olympics nipped Vancouver Inter-Italia, 3-2, at Empire Stadium.

Vic-West took the lead in the first half when Tom Forrester completed a three-way play with Mike Sails and Danny Lomas at the 35-minute mark.

Lomas put Vic-West two goals up at three minutes of the second half and Bill Coplin scored the Sporting Club goal, ten minutes later.

The victory gave Victoria clubs three of a possible four points from games against Inter-City League clubs on the weekend. On Saturday, Gorge rallied for a 1-1 tie against Simon Fraser University Clansmen.

In New Westminster, Gary Thompson scored twice for the Blues, who have two games in hand on Gorge. Joe Little and Gordie Glover were the other New Westminster marksmen and Ed Cannon netted all three goals for Paul's.

Ed Paver, Dave Baldwin and Don Considine scored for the Inter-City League Olympics and Stanko Bogdanovich and Dan Webster tallied for Inter-italia.

Young Detroit Sniper Sets Scoring Record

Marcel Dionne has been shortchanged, but things are about to change.

Somewhat overlooked as attention was focused on other young stars in the National Hockey League, the stocky 21-year-old centre continues to set a record-breaking pace for Detroit Red Wings.

Dionne, who set a rookie record last season by getting 77 points and got less notice than Rich Martin because the Buffalo sharpshooter outscored him, 44-28, has already almost matched his first season's total.

The Detroit 170-pounder, who measures only five feet eight inches, scored his 33rd and 34th goals on Sunday in 5-0 conquest of St. Louis Flyers to bring his production for the first 62 games this season to 74 points.

That gives Dionne a second record — more points than made by any player in his first two NHL seasons. And he still has 16 games remaining this season to add to his total of 151 points.

The previous high for the first two seasons was the 146 points managed by Gil Perreault of Buffalo Sabres, who was the outstanding rookie of the 1970-71 season.

Dionne, who now has 30 points — 16 of them goals — from his last 20 games, was a standout against the Flyers. He whipped the puck past Wayne Stephenson to open the scoring a 64 seconds, and was back little more than five minutes later for the 3-0 goal.

The Wings, who were coming off a letdown on Saturday in New York, where they fell to the lowly Islanders, kept control of things the rest of the way.

However, victory failed to move them closer to the fourth-place Sabres, who maintained their margin at four points by squeezing past Pittsburgh Penguins, 2-1.

Other Sunday games improved things for Chicago Black Hawks, New York Rangers and Philadelphia Flyers.

The Hawks kept their West Division lead at seven points by besting Atlanta Flames, 4-2, with two goals by Dennis Hull providing the difference. And the Flyers boosted their grip on second place to five points, scoring three goals in 44 seconds during a four-goal first period and going on to clobber California Golden Seals, 7-0.

An ability to bounce back helped put the Rangers back into second place in the East-Division. Trailing, 0-2, after the first period of their game against Minnesota North Stars and 1-4 early in the second period, they banged in five straight goals and finally prevailed, 6-5.

Award Finalists

Boxla Star, Cyclist And Placekicker

Two of the three finalists for Victoria's male athlete of the year award this year achieved their greatest fame well away from Vancouver Island in 1972.

Dave Cutler, a professional football player with Edmonton Eskimos, and Tom Morris, an international-class cyclist, join lacrosse star Ivan Thompson as the nominees for the annual award, which will be presented at the Sports Celebrity Dinner, March 12.

Kicking-specialist Cutler had an outstanding season for the Eskimos. A 26-year-old high-school teacher, he led the Western Football Conference in scoring and kicked a record six field goals in one game.

Morris, in his fifth season of competitive cycling, capped a great year by competing for Canada at the Olympic Games in Munich.

He was a part of Canada's four-man road-race team and also competed in the individual road race, finishing 62nd.

Other 1972 achievements included a first place in a two-day road race in Montreal, a fifth place in the La Tour de la Nouvelle France in Quebec and a second in the 100-mile road-racing championships, held in Victoria.

Thompson, in his second season with Victoria Shamrocks, was Mr. Everything for the Western Lacrosse Association club.

He led the team in scoring, was considered the most competitive and best-conditioned player in a team pool, and was named to the WLA all-star squad.

Thompson, who scored 49 goals and contributed 68 assists for 117 points, made a remarkable comeback after being sidelined for most of the 1971 season with a knee injury.

The winner, who will inherit the trophy won by golfer Dave Mick last year, will be honored, along with the female, team, and sports executive-of-the-year at the Empress Hotel. Head-table guests include former-NHL performer John Ferguson, Canadian basketball coach Jack Donahue and Jim Young, star receiver with the B.C. Lions.

Milford led the Hornets with three penalty goals and a conversion.

Trevino Accepts Gift Title

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Forrest Fezler missed short putts on the last two holes Sunday and let Lee Trevino escape with the victory and a $52,000 first-place cheque in the Jackie Gleason golf tournament.

Trevino, who had his troubles earlier this season, matched par 72 on the 7128-yard Inverrary Golf Club course and backed in to his first victory of the season when the youthful Fezler blew it down the stretch.

Trevino, now the winner of 14 American tour titles in his brief career, finished with a 279 total, nine under par.

The 23-year-old Fezler, a non-winning tour sophomore who had to win his spot in this $260,000 event in Tuesday qualifying, was disconsolate after his final-round 76 for a 280 total.

Fezler missed a four-foot par putt on the 17th to let Trevino—already in the clubhouse—take a share of the lead and failed on a five-foot effort for a birdie that would have forced a playoff on the final hole.

Bob Murphy took third alone with a 71-281 under a gray sky and occasional chill drizzle.

Sam Snead, a 60-year-old marvel, and Australian Bruce Devlin were next at 282. Snead had a 71 and Devlin 72.

Fezler, a leader through the first three rounds, started the day with a three-stroke advantage and surprisingly still led by two strokes after a 39 on the first nine holes.

He and Trevino matched birdies on the 10th and 11th, so the difference stayed the same.

The drama was saved for the finishing holes. It started on the 532-yard, par five 15th.

Trevino put his second shot in a bunker, played a long sand shot to within six feet and made the putt for a birdie.

Fezler, playing the hole a few minutes later, had a delicate chip over a bunker for his second shot and dumped it in the sand.

He came out short and missed a 25-foot putt for a bogey, and the tournament was tied.

The young man from California gave himself another chance, however, on the 18th hole. He punched a short iron second shot only about five feet above the hole and needed the putt for a birdie to force a playoff.

He missed it. And in missing, he also lost a shot at the Masters and an exemption from qualifying for tour events for two seasons.

Jack Nicklaus, the pre-tourney favorite, never really got in position and finished with a 71-283.

Arnold Palmer, a winner in his previous start, wasn't a factor. The 43-year-old master had a final round of 73 and was far back in the field at 292.

The 1973 Jeep Truck. It works up a storm

Hook up this 4-wheel drive Jeep Truck to the optional snow plow, and watch the white stuff fly. This is one truck with guts enough to handle any kind of work those winter winds can whip up.
Rugged 258 CID six is standard. Or you can get a work hungry optional 360 CID V-8 with either 2 or 4 barrel carburetion. Take your choice of three heavy duty transmissions—a three speed manual (standard), a four speed manual or three speed automatic (both optional). With the Jeep Truck you have a choice of 2 wheelbases as well as 6 models. Payloads range from 1285 lbs. all the way to a whopping 3520 lbs.
And remember, the Jeep Truck is built from the ground up as a 4-wheel drive truck.

Why not come in out of the cold and talk a deal. Test drive a Jeep Truck. It's one of the hardest cold weather workers of them all . . . at a price that will keep you warm all through the winter.

Postal Curling

Sigurdson Wins

It only took five ends to decide the B.C. postal employee curling championship Sunday at the Victoria Curling Club.

Don Sigurdson's rink from White Rock was ahead by 11-0 when Doug Glenn of New Westminster conceded after the fifth end.

Sigurdson (Dale Walker, Gene Dunkley, Don McGladerley) now move on to the national finals, beginning April 9 in Halifax.

The White Rock foursome had a perfect record in the three-day B.C. championships, winning seven straight games.

Sigurdson, who won the "A" event with a 5-0 record, trimmed Paul Barkely of Port Coquitlam, 5-4, in the "B" final. Glenn took the "B" event with a 4-1 record.

Eliminated in earlier matches were Victoria rinks skipped by Pat Baggett, Ken Guthrie and Harry Daniels.

A total of eight rinks competed.

Boxing Club, which has only one loss in 17 starts, tripped second-place Victoria West, 5-3, to move three points ahead of their closest rivals.

Coach Brian Robinson scored a goal for the Boxers, who have 30 points for 17 games. Ralph Anderson was best for Vic West with a pair of goals.

Lower Taxes Seen

Residential property owners can look forward to a 20-per-cent reduction in property taxes next year, Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said Monday.

The reduction will have to be financed by the city's commercial and industrial property owners who are facing an estimated increase in their taxes of 40 per cent.

Ceiling On Increase

The redistribution of the property tax burden will be the result of proposed provincial legislation which calls for removal of the 10-per-cent ceiling on annual assessment increases for all commercial and industrial property.

The ceiling would remain in effect for all residential property.

The legislation would put into effect another clause of the Assessment Equalization Act which says that all property must be assessed at 50 per cent of its market value. At present, the average assessment in Victoria is at about 35 per cent.

No Special Rate

Pollen said the city would not set up a special commercial mill rate to soften the effect of a sudden increase in commercial and industrial assessment, a step suggested by the Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

Instead, the over-all mill rate would be lowered by about 14 mills, resulting in a 20-per-cent reduction of taxes on static assessments.

Residential property owners will get all the benefits of the mill rate reduction since their assessments will not increase by more than 10 mills.

Commercial and industrial property owners will first have their assessments increased by about 50 per cent; after that, they will also benefit from the mill rate decrease, but they will still end up with a net tax increase of about 40 per cent.

The mayor said that's the way it should be. Residential property owners had been subsidizing commercial property owners whose assessments had been unreal for too long, Pollen said.

The mayor's announcement triggered protests from Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Terry Farmer.

"I'm disappointed that the mayor says there will be no special commercial mill rate. Many businesses won't be able to survive the tax increase," Farmer said.

"They just can't afford it. They can hardly get through the winter now. The new minimum wage, the increase in corporation taxes and the property tax increase would be just too much for many marginal businesses," he added.

Three-Way Fight for Seat

The March 10 election to fill the Esquimalt council seat of the late Ald. Art Cuthbert will be a three-way race.

Nominations closed at noon Monday with three candidates for the seat.

Conrad Lundgren, 29, of 635 Admirals, a machinist at HMC Dockyard and an unsuccessful aldermanic candidate in December filed first.

Also running is Mrs. Ada Barnes, 66, of 1137 Bewdley. She is secretary-treasurer of the Esquimalt Chamber of Commerce and ran unsuccessfully for municipal office in 1970.

George McCreadie, 35, of 766 Hutchinson, was last to file Monday morning, but said his candidacy was not a last-minute decision.

McCreadie has lived in Esquimalt since the age of six except for eight years when he served in the RCAF, reaching the rank of flight lieutenant.

He is a chartered accountant and is employed as office manager and comptroller of Victoria Paving Ltd. Married with three children, McCreadie is active in minor sports.

McCreadie said Monday he supports the orderly development of Esquimalt.

"In my time back in Esquimalt (since 1964) it has developed as a municipality should. Council is doing an excellent job."

His specialty is finance and would like to offer his expertise to the community, he said.

McCreadie has not run for public office previously, he said.

Municipalities Upset

Land Freezing Action Sparks Quick Meeting

Mayor Ross Marks of 100 Mile House, president of the Union of B.C. Municipalities said Monday the aims of the provincial government's new Land Commission Act are commendable, but the proposed methods could be criticized.

In a telephone interview from 100 Mile House, Marks said he will urge members of the UBCM's executive at an emergency meeting Wednesday in Victoria not to simply condemn the propsoed legislation.

"What the provincial government is trying to achieve is good. You can't argue with that. The opposition stems perhaps from the fact that the act would erode municipal and regional board jurisdictions," Marks said.

Asked whether municipalities had done a good job preventing erosion of farmland by unchecked development, Marks replied, "There are probably as many answers to that question as there are municipalities."

He didn't want to speak for "pressure areas like the Fraser Valley and the Okanagan" but he said he wouldn't doubt that the legislation was primarily aimed at those areas.

The meeting of the 16-member executive, he said, would be held behind closed doors, but a statement would later be released.

The meeting was requested earlier Monday by Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, Conservative MLA for Saanich and the Islands, past president of the UBCM.

Curtis said the proposed legislation questions the integrity of all local governments by implying that municipal and regional incompetence in preserving agricultural land had made the provincial measures necessary.

The bill currently before the Legislature would give a five-member government-appointed commission wide powers to deal with land use in the province.

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said it was regrettable that not more mayors will be able to attend Wednesday's UBCM executive meeting. He, for one, will be excluded because he is not on the executive.

He said he would have liked to air his views on the proposed legislation.

"It is a courageous move on the part of the provincial government to recognize the necessity of saving farmland," Pollen said.

"The idea that private property is sacrosanct has no basis in natural law or our British heritage," he said.

Municipalities, Pollen added, had not been able to withstand pressure from developers. Therefore, the matter must be taken care of by the provincial government.

Meanwhile Social Credit caucus in the Legislature continued its attack on the government's land commission bill, urging that each person in B.C. to get a copy of the bill and, "having read it, take the opportunity to say loud and clear to the socialist government that they have gone too far."

The nine-member caucus issued a press release Monday describing the bill as "a specific socialist-inspired frontal attack on the very basis of private ownership of land itself. The bill literally brings every square inch of British Columbia under absolute state control."

The bill, introduced in the Legislature last Thursday by Agriculture Minister David Stupich, would create a five-man, cabinet-appointed provincial land commission with wide-ranging powers over the land use and zoning of farmland, greenbelt land, urban landbank land and parkland in B.C.

The Socred caucus said it will fight the bill in the house, "but we think that regardless of party ties, this is one bill where the action taken against it should be to encourage individuals to use every democratic way to impress on the government the need to withdraw this bill in its entirety."

The Social Crediters said they wouldn't fall for the suggestion of Premier Barrett that the bill could be amended because "this bill is incapable of being amended by the normal legislative process ... it is so totally all-encompassing that it can only be remedied by total withdrawal."

The caucus said it would not amend the bill except by trying to have it withdrawn.

"The bill is an unprecedented action on the part of a free democratic Legislature, and we earnestly ask all the people of British Columbia to read this bill now and to make their feelings known immediately as citizens in a free country."

Saanich Council Approves 90-Unit Apartment Block

A proposal to build a 90-unit apartment block on a parcel of land bounded by Burnside, Eldon and Tolcross was given Saanich council sanction at a public hearing Monday night as a major step towards improving the area.

Despite strong objections by some local residents about possible traffic congestion and a recommendation from the municipal planner that a town house project would be more suitable, Saanich aldermen unanimously approved rezoning the land from detached housing to medium-density apartment use.

Moving approval for the rezoning Ald. Alan Newberry said: "This is a case of urban renewal and this is the kind of area where we should be building apartments."

He discounted residents' fears that the three-storey block would increase the crime-rate in the area and suggested that, because of an agreement between the developer and Saanich's development engineer, road conditions would actually be improved.

Architect Ben Levinson told aldermen that the project would mean that eight old houses — some nearly 70 years old — would be demolished. The owners had called in developer Gordon Saunders, he said, to build a apartment building incorporating an extensive road-widening and repair scheme planned by the municipality.

Council gave grudging approval to a proposal to build a 24-unit apartment on land bounded by Earlston and Mortimer but voted unanimously for rezoning from detached housing to medium density.

Ald. William Noel expressed concern over the design and lack of underground parking.

However Ald. Frank Waring pointed out that council was simply concerned with land use and had no control, as yet, over specific design and parking arrangements.

He sugggested a look into the relevant bylaw to see whether a stipulation for underground parking could be incorporated.

Ald. Edith Gunning said she was not "overly enthusiastic" about the proposal but Ald. Alan Newberry thought it was better than many of the apartment buildings in the area.

Condition 'Fair'

Cathy McPherrin, 14, of 2148 McNeill, Oak Bay, was in fair condition in the Royal Jubilee Hospital Monday after she was hit while riding her bicycle by a car driven by Alan Brooks, 22, of 1033 Wychbury, Esquimalt, at Oak Bay Avenue and Rockland.

Study on Elderly Under Wraps

A $24,000 study on senior citizens in B.C., which recommends more home and personal care for the elderly, will be discussed with the provincial government in Victoria Wednesday.

The province-wide study took more than a year to prepare and was financed by grants from the B.C. Medical Services Foundation and the government.

The Social Planning and Research Council (SPARC) is being secretive about the contents of its 179-page report, and will only say it is comprehensive and contains "facts and figures" on 24 of the 28 regional districts in B.C.

Under the heading of "Capital Region," for instance, it mentions that there are 688 extended care beds for that 5 per cent of the old-age population requiring major attention, and 1,582 beds for the 10 per cent needing personal care.

Vancouver architect Brian Masson, project chairman, said in an interview the study does not emphasize recommendations and but is "somewhat philosophical."

He wasquoted in a press release as saying: "Our committee was well aware that reports have been prepared by many different bodies dealing with specific segments of the need for community care for older people. But there was no systemized description of this whole area of care on a province-wide basis."

The two recommendations, home care and better personal care facilities, are not new concepts by any means. Health Minister Dennis Cocke has already commented on both these needs and his department's intentions to deal with them.

Realtors Fear Price Upheaval

If the B.C. government decides to zone or buy large tracts of land for specific purposes under its Land Commission Act, how will this affect private speculation on adjoining "free" land?

What affect would this have on urban development?

A local real estate man, Philip Holmes of Pemberton Holmes Ltd., said Monday that the act could conceivable boost the price of some land.

"The whole secret of keeping land prices down is to keep enough land available. If the government's intention is to buy and not develop, the remaining land by this action could go up in price."

Holmes also referred to the designation in Britain of large green-belt areas which made development land "immensely scarce" and contributed to urban crowding.

And even though B.C. is much larger than Britain, with a far smaller population, "most of the land is mountain-tops," he said.

Holmes said the real estate community is holding back comment on the implications of the act until it has studied it further. "The main thing to worry about now," he said, "is the philosophy of the commission, and if it should have the powers it has."

Microwave Oven Check Ordered

Saanich district school board Monday night ordered an immediate inspection of a microwave oven at Claremont high school to determine if there might be a radiation leak.

Until Monday night, the board was unaware that there was such an oven in its school system. The information was obtained from a Claremont representtative attending the meeting in connection with another matter.

Long-term dangers connected with radiation leaks from such ovens were disclosed at meetings earlier this month of Greater Victoria Health Board.

School board chairman Mrs. Rubymay Parrott made provisions Monday to have all schools informed of the possible dangers.

Top-Flight Interviewer Rarely Lets Go

She Did What All Journalists Wanted To Do

NEW YORK, N.Y. — The small, slender woman who opens the door looks fragile, like an undernourished bird, and there is vulnerability in her eyes.

Until one hears the strong clear tones of the voice that seems too big for the body, it is difficult to believe that this is the Oriana Fallaci who has served as a war correspondent in Vietnam and interviewed some of the most important people in the world — most recently presidential adviser Henry Kissinger and Nguyen Van Thieu, president of South Vietnam. She has even been shot — three times while covering the 1968 Olympics in Mexico City.

The author of five books and a reporter for the Italian magazine L'Europeo for the past 17 years, Miss Fallaci is amused by the celebrity status that these two journalistic coups have suddenly thrust on her. "What's happening in these weeks is very funny for me. I understand that they come to interview me because I'm writing a book, but that they come to interview me because I interview Dr. Kissinger and President Thieu is something I cannot understand," she said here.

"The only thing that pleases me is that I am revenging the women who are humiliated and badly treated . . . It was good that I did these two things that all the journalists wanted to do, that it was a woman. The other thing — mind now, pay attention! — let's make it clear I am not a nationalist. However, I found it amusing that it was also an Italian who did it — a female dago who made all this noise in America. I love it!" she shouted, laughing.

Miss Fallaci speaks in italics and exclamation points, with hands fluttering like wings. She is Florentine. A tremendous vitality emanates from her, a passion, that has doubtless contributed to her success as an interviewer. She spoke of her intense curiosity, which has elicited remarkable admissions from her famous subjects, who have included Norman Mailer, Ingrid Bergman, H. Rap Brown, and Robert Kennedy. There are two apparent reasons.

One is her talent for intimacy. She easily establishes an atmosphere of confidence and closeness and creates the impression that she would tell you anything. Consequently you feel safe to do the same with her.

Oriana Fallaci has tremendous vitality

The other factor is her relentlessness. When Miss Fallaci wants to pursue a line of questioning she rarely lets go, as in the interview with Dr. Kissinger, who kept trying to avoid the subject of the Vietnam war. She does not appear to be afraid of anyone.

"I used to be intimidated when I was younger," she recalled. "I used to be scared of people . . . The point is that since I have started to interview people in power I have found how 'everyday' they are. I don't know how to put it. Sometimes they are mediocre. Really they are not better, they are not superior. I have met very few superior people.

"Now if they are not superior, there is no reason to be intimidated. If they are superior, like the very few that I have found, they don't make you feel intimidated. They descend from their pedestal, and they come to you with their hand open and you feel at your ease. When they are more intelligent, more clever, they are nicer." Among those she cited as "superior" are Indira Gandhi, Golda Meir, and Pietro Nenni, the Italian Socialist leader.

Miss Fallaci takes her work seriously, always using a tape recorder to ensure accuracy and adhering to her own code of ethics. "I am for taping so you don't betray people . . .

"People must have the freedom to ask me everything they want and I must have the freedom to ask people everything I want.

"You know, I always respect the answer as it is given to me. I have realized that the questions are not so important; the answers are. You can say, 'How do you feel today?' and I can give you any answer. The answer you must respect . . . I have been educated as a girl, as a young girl, to respect people. Even when I hate them I respect them. Even if they're my enemies, I still respect them.

"So when I talk with people, there's always a conflict in me between the fact of wanting so much to make a portrait of someone or have the news, which is my duty . . . and a sense of embarrassment, of timidity, because I undress these people and deep in my heart I say, 'Do I have the right to do it?' You can overcome such a conflict only through respect . . .

"I am inevitably as a free person, an independent person, rather politicized. I have my ideas on various things, for instance, the war in Vietnam. However, when I go to interview people I always undress myself of the ideas and of the opinions that I alreay have about that person because those opinions were formed through the opinions of the others, that is, reading what the others have written. It would be absolutely useless to go with the opinion of the others — I could stay home and write the story at my desk.

"I am rather unpredictable in the result of these interviews. For instance, nobody expected me to be rather nice with Thieu. I detest what he represents, and yet I rather defended him . . . He was so thirsty to be understood, so desperate and alone . . .

"I went to Dr. Kissinger determined to write something very nice, and I told him 'You know, Dr. Kissinger, in the last years of my life I've been writing exclusively about people making war. This time I want to write the portrait of a man who is trying to make peace.' I really meant it. I was hoping to adore him and he froze me . . . One turned out to be a human being and the other to be just a politician and a professor."

Miss Fallaci's immediate plans focus on a return to Vietnam. When asked how she felt about it she groaned, "Ah, nausea, nausea. You have the sense of deja vu, already seen. Nothing is new anymore. You're not fresh anymore, your impressions are not fresh . . .

'Eight times I have been in Vietnam. Each time after the first time I've said this is the last time. And I keep going back. When you have seen that thing practically since the beginning, because I arrived there when the American involvement began, you have to see the end. And the last time I went there to see the end and I did not see the end, so I have to go back again to see the end." (She labelled the current cease-fire agreement "a mockery.")

In her last book, a searching, personal account of the war, called Nothing, and So Be It (Doubleday, $7.95), Miss Fallaci explains that her fascination with war is a fascination with the extremities of life and death and their meaning. She describes the heroism that is part of war as well as the horror.

"I'm a pacifist by instinct because I am against violence, any form of violence, and because I hate death and destruction," she explains. "I stop being a pacifist the moment that I reason and recall that the dignity of man is not to accept what is unjust and to defend himself when he is attacked . . . It's a conflict in me . . . You see, my thinking of war is, 'You are my enemy, I know you are my enemy and I fight you.'

Fallaci easily creates confidence . . . and she doesn't seem to fear anyone

'I have been educated to respect people. Even when I hate them I still respect them'

"I think a war in individual terms but the war I have seen in Vietnam is something so gigantic — it's 500 B-52's gone to bomb Hanoi, the artillery, the monstrous technology . . . It's the illogical side of the war that I don't understand. Having been in the Resistance I know that there are occasions when it is right to fight when you have to fight, but in that case the choice was easier."

"Miss Fallaci feels that the war changed her. "It aged me. Oh yes, it aged me," she sighed. "I'm much more nervous since I spent all the time in Vietnam. And I'm much more balanced . . . The more I go on the more I discover it is true: that man is not angel and not beast but angel and beast. I am very much more cautious now in judging people. I always float in a sort of uncertainty because with the worst in a man you can find the best. You can be deceived."

As for the future, what Miss Fallaci would most like to do is retire to her family's country home in Tuscany and write "a couple of books," one a love story. She no longer wishes to write about war.

But she cannot afford to stop working yet, so what she wants to write about now is power: "The men who hold power. Not the abstract idea of power. Otherwise I would go to some professor at Yale or a psychiatrist and ask him, 'What is power.' I am seduced by the idea of trying to understand who are these men and women, why they are there, was it some kind of destiny, was it by chance, and when they get there are they aware of what they have in their hands? If they were not very intelligent, do they become more intelligent? If they were bad, do they become better? If they were good, do they become worse?

"Power does not seduce me. For instance. I would never have interest in a man who is powerful . . . I see him automatically ugly . . . A man in power is there to make me obey him, and I would place him among the other things that make the dignity of man his disobedience. He wants to command me. He decides for me. Viola!"

Yes, Miss Fallaci confirms, there are feminist implications to her words. But she is an independent thinker and does not ally herself with those in women's lib. "I think they play a little too much the victims," she quipped. "If they play less the victims and do more, they would achieve more. But the essence of what they say is right, and you and I would not be here if there had not been some suffragettes."

She is vehemently opposed to employment discrimination, and is even something of a female chauvinist. "The most intelligent heads of state I have found are women," she stated.

Arctic Camp Food

Cook on Griddle If Diners Grumpy

CALGARY (CP) — Lunch was beef and vegetable soup, ham steak with mashed potatoes, peas and carrots, with chocolate cake and vanilla sauce for dessert.

A few hours later, the diners sat down to a meal of roast turkey with gravy and stuffing, followed by strawberry shortcake.

The food was great, but there was only one problem. — If you didn't like the particular dish being served, there was nowhere else to go.

The "restaurant" which featured this menu was a typical oil camp above the Arctic circle. If you weren't in the mood for ham steak or roast turkey, it meant a long walk at 50-below zero to an alternative eatery.

Supplying food and services to remote exploration camps is big business in Alberta. Next to the toolpush or head driller, the cook is probably the most important man on the camp crew.

Working 12-hour shifts in bad weather tends to build up a big appetite and food plays a major role in the lives of men cut off for weeks at a time from the other good things of life.

It takes an impressive logistical and culinary effort in such places as Calgary, Edmonton and Inuvik, N.W.T., to move the steak from the slaughterhouse to the dining table at the oil camp.

"We supply camps with everything from the food to the cooks to prepare it and the pots and pans to cook it in," says Claude Cabal, general manager of Foothills Catering Ltd.

"Last week, we shipped 15,000 pounds of fresh produce by air from Edmonton to Inuvik, a week's supply for seven camps."

Cabal, in the catering business for 20 years in such countries as Spain, Alberta and Tunisia, calculates it takes about 10 pounds of food per man per day to feed drilling crews.

Cabal estimates it costs at least $15 per man per day for food at remote camps once all the transportation and other costs are added up for both the caterer and the customer.

Getting the food to the camp is one thing. Keeping the diners from shooting the cook is another.

"It's impossible to please everybody, and if there's any trouble on the job, the men are liable to take their troubles out on the food," Cabal says.

If there is not enough variety in the menus, you get complaints and even when you've got a good cook you have to change him once in a while.

The cooks—who earn $700 to $1,000 a month plus free room and board — get tired of the isolation just like the other men and some of the cooks with international experience don't fit in with Canadian tastes.

Some Canadian workers, for example, asked for pancakes and were unhappy when they got crepes suzettes.

Milk Price Boost Seen as Hardship

Announcement by Silverwood Dairies of a two-cent price increase on milk effective Thursday will cause hardship to those people on fixed incomes, says president of the Victoria branch, Consumers Association of Canada, Norma Andrews.

The proposed increase is the second to be made by the diary this year. The last raise was one cent on the quart Feb. 3.

Mrs. Andrews said she was investigating the reason for the increase and will have a representative of CAC report to a meeting of the provincial body today in Vancouver.

However, customers receiving milk at the door received a Dear Customer note Monday saying: "As the cost of milk from the farm continues to rise, along with substantial increases in wages and other costs we must adjust our price effective March 1."

The letter continued "We suggest you lessen the burden of the increase by prepurchasing milk tokens this week at current prices.

"We also recommend the economy of milk in the low-priced three-quart containers, including both two per cent and skim."

The increase will mean consumers will pay 45 cents for a single quart of homogenized milk; 43 cents for two per cent and 39 cents for skim.

Abortion Plea Lost In Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Supreme Court has dismissed an attack on New York's liberalized abortion law by a university professor who claimed to be the guardian of unborn fetuses.

Advisory Committee

Cabinet Compromises On Status of Women

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Council of Women asked the cabinet Monday for a permanent federal council to look into the status of women, but it settled for a national advisory committee which will report to Labor Minister John Munro.

The minister and 16 cabinet colleagues proposed the committee at a two-hour meeting with representatives of NCW, a national organization representing about 750,000 women through provincial councils and member women's clubs.

New president Mrs. John Hnatyshyn of Saskatoon said in an interview later:

"We had hoped for something a little more grandiose, I must say, but we are very pleased that the minister is considering an advisory council."

The suggestion, major one of 14 discussed with Prime Minister Trudeau and his ministers, called for a permanent council to advise on matters pertaining to women and report on progress to improve their status. It also would undertake research, establish programs to correct attitudes and prejudices adversely affecting women, propose legislation and policies and consult organizations concerned about problems of women.

Munro said the national advisory committee would do these things and he told reporters later that setting up an advisory committee could be done much more quickly than setting up a council, which would need approval of Parliament.

The minister said the committee could be established for a year or two. If it did not prove satisfactory, the whole issue could be reconsidered.

He envisaged a committee of about 20 to 30 members, including representatives from women's organizations and business, professional women and housewives.

"I hope it can be operative in a month or six week."

Mrs. Hnatsyshyn said she was pleased with the reception given the whole brief, which stressed conditions that descriminate against women but also was conserned with ecology, consumer education and the problems of youth.

Another major area concerned occupational training programs and the NCW brief recommended that these federal programs should be reaching more women.

Manpower Minister Robert Andras said his department is planning to expand advertising programs and is doing research into the kinds of women in the program, those still in need of the program and how they can be reached most effectively.

Two other main recommendations concerned day care. The brief urged the government to amend the National Housing Act to allow loans for construction, purchase and renovation of buildings for day care centres and to permit the inclusion of space for them in housing developments.

Ron Basford, urban affairs minister, said these facilities could be included as the act stands. His department was planning new legislation to set up a program of loans and grants to replace the old urban renewal program.

The new program would put emphasis on improvement and rehabilitation of existing neighborhoods and stress the need for community amenities in family areas.

The NCW brief also recommended:

- Implementation of a guaranteed annual income to the heads of all one-parent families with dependent children.
- More women to be appointed to the Senate and federal courts.
- Federal funds to support facilities and programs to rehabilitate female prostitutes and prevent young girls from becoming prostitutes.

'Appointments Should Cross Party Lines'

Brown . . . westerners too

New Democratic Party MLA for Vancouver-Burrard, Rosemary Brown said Monday the federal government's announcement of a special advisory committee on the status of women, "isn't a real commitment, but it's better than what we've had before."

Mrs. Brown said she hoped the committee would represent women from all economic levels.

"I really hope Munro (federal labor minister John Munro) appoints radicals to it and all the members aren't chosen from eastern Canada," she added.

With a note of pessimism in her voice, she added: "The government will probably do the same thing as the task force they set up two years ago and name Liberals to the committee. It should cross party lines."

The former president of Victoria's Status of Women action group, Kathleen Ruff suggested the committee isn't to be just a public relations group.

"The government should appoint to this committee people who really experience discrimination such as women on low incomes, welfare women, single parents, active women and immigrants," she said.

"Immigrant women living in large Canadian cities are being exploited constantly. Because many can't speak English well, they are used and they don't know their rights."

Mrs. Ruff said the committee should report to Parliament and as an inter-party committee should be open and accessible to all.

She added the committee should comprise women only.

"Women are capable of doing what is needed on their own. Also, I want to see regional representation, not a closed little elite group."

Russians Eating Nearly as Well As Americans

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A UN study shows that Russians eat almost as well as Americans and certainly much better than they did 20 years ago before the Soviet Union shifted emphasis from industry to agriculture.

The study says that up to the early 1950s Soviet food consumption standards "must be described as low."

The average Russian ate only 63.8 pounds of meat and fats a year, no more than the average Bolivian and Peruvian today. His fish consumption was only 15-18 pounds.

By 1970, the average Russian was eating 121 pounds of meat and fats yearly and 39 pounds of fish, second only to the fishing peoples of Scandinavia, the Iberian Peninsula and the Pacific.

The Czechoslovak ate 167 pounds of meat in 1970, compared to the Briton's 211 and the American's 286 about the same time.

There no longer is any "significant difference" between Eastern European and Western countries in per capita calorie and protein consumption, the study says.

But on cloth, clothing and shoes in Eastern Europe, the study says, "present consumption levels are still below those of the most developed countries, and quality, variety and adaptability to consumer tastes leave much to be desired."

In the less-developed countries of Africa, Asia and Latin America, the study says, there is a widening gap between supply and demand or food because of population increases.

Court To Rule On CIA Trial

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The United States Supreme Court has agreed to decide whether an ordinary taxpayer may force the government into a trial over the secret funding of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA).

The high court will review the decision the U.S. Court of Appeals handed down in december affirming that William Richardson of Greensburg, Pa., had a legal right to a trial on the points his suit raised.

Princess Alice Turns 90

LONDON (UPI) — Standing gray and fragile-at the Kensington bus stop, she made the kind of picture that led one bystander to hum a few happy bars of Little Old Lady under his breath.

She looked no different than any other older British lady, queued up and waiting patiently for the No. 9 bus, but a passing policeman suddenly recognized her and snapped a smart salute. Her fellow riders turned for a better and harder look at their travelling companion. Few knew who she was.

Not many of this generation know much about the remarkable old lady who lives in the Clock House of Kensington Palace and is listed in the reference books as her Royal Highness, Princess Alice, Countess of Athlone.

On Sunday, Princess Alice, older of the two surviving granddaughters of Queen Victoria, celebrated her 90th birthday, but not in the bosom of the family.

"She always goes away on her birthday," said her lady-in-waiting, "so she flew to the West Indies."

The trip must have been a bit of a letdown because the princess prefers the adventurous atmosphere of the banana boats she rode until she was 88. Now, alas, they are out of service.

Well, if a lady of a certain age wants to spend her birthday elsewhere there's not much her affectionate family can do about it. Her grandniece, Queen Elizabeth, sent a card or made a phone call. So did her other kinfolk and the friends she has gathered around the world in a long life alone and as companion to the late Earl of Athlone who was governor general of South Africa and Canada.

One of these good friends is King Gustav of Sweden, who also is 90 and her gardening adviser. They both tend small gardens and when she last visited him two years ago, they discussed mutual agricultural problems.

Princess Alice lived for 20 years in the reign of Queen Victoria, was related to or otherwise knew everybody who was socially anybody in Europe and turned her reminiscences into a near best-seller when she was 82. She called it For My Grandchildren. She is still one of the best raconteurs in royal circles.

She remembers Queen Victoria ordering one of the new flush toilets and instructing a palace official: "Mind you, test it and sit on it to make sure it's the right height." Or pointing to the low cut neckline of another granddaughter's dress with the words: "A little rose in front, dear child, because of the footmen."

When she was five, Princess Alice upset Lewis Carroll, who wrote Alice in Wonderland, by commenting on his stammer.

Princess Alice has no complaints with destiny. In youth she had beauty and position, in old age, mental and physical agility.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: You told the guy who confessed he was hooked on pep pills to go to a doctor at once. That advice was okay but it wasn't strong enough. Very few doctors know what to do for an amphetamine addict. So please listen to someone who has travelled that road.

First: Tell your wife immediately. Keeping it from her is a big mistake. She knows something is wrong with you and it will be a relief if you level with her and ask for her help.

Second: Quit that extra job. It's what got you into trouble. The paycheque from that second job looked pretty good at the time, but now you know it wasn't worth it.

If you take this advice you will receive an additional reward which I am sure you are not expecting. Very few men realize that the time spent at home will mean a lot more to their wives and children than anything a second paycheque could buy. I promise you this is true. But then, you will see for yourself. — Know That Road Well.

Dear Know: Good advice — and straight from the feedbox. Many doctors say they would rather try to get a patient off heroin than amphetamines. It's easier. Good luck to you.

□

Dear Ann Landers: I've written dozens of times but have always torn up the letters because I decided you couldn't help me. But this letter is going in the mail no matter what. My story will sound like a hokey soap opera but I swear by the Almighty that every word is true.

My husband and my daughter (stepdaughter to him) had an affair. I am so upset about it I can't see straight. There are times when I would like to kill them both although I know is was all her fault. The girl tempted him in ways he couldn't resist.

I don't ever want to see my daughter again, but I know when she comes to visit (she lives 300 miles from here) I must act like everything is lovely. She has a nice husband and three children. No one would guess in a million years what went on with those two.

Please tell me how a person can recover from such treachery. How could the two people closest to me have done such a thing? I need your help. — Broken Spirit.

Dear Spirit: I can't straighten out in a few paragraphs a problem that needs hours of ventilating. Don't try to bury it or it will explode later like a time bomb.

The thought to keep uppermost in your mind is that what happened between them was an impetuous, unplanned, moment of weakness. The affair probably had no meaning to either of them. They are no doubt both ashamed and trying to forget it. Avail yourself of some short-term therapy and get this talked out of your system.

□

Dear Ann Landers: I hope you won't throw this letter in the wastebasket because I really need an answer and I can't find it in any etiquette book. What is the proper way to eat an olive? Is it polite to pick it up with your fingers? What should I do with the pits? Thank you. — Ill At Ease.

Dear Ill: The best way to eat an olive is to pick it up and put it in your mouth. The pits go on your plate. What else could you possibly do with them? When in doubt always do the logical thing. Good manners is nothing more than good sense.

Vienna Choir Boys' Songs Pure Delight

By ERITH SMITH
Colonist Reporter

The Royal Theatre was sold out Sunday afternoon but still many Victorians missed hearing the delightful performance of the Vienna Choir Boys.

For these people there's good news: it is virtually certain that the choir will visit Victoria on its tour next year. It will be a flying visit (literally) so once again there will be just a single performance.

Tour spokesmen said Sunday's reception here was so great that they would be most happy to return — and there was no doubt of the reception. The applause for each song or group of songs was deafening.

These youngsters, aged from 10 to 14, have a freshness in their singing that is pure delight. The quality of their singing is, of course, above comment. They just don't become choir members without it.

Their program followed, in a sense, the almost-500-year history of the choir itself: sacred music to begin with, since they were formed originally as church singers; then a one-act comic opera, depicting another step in their development as singers for the community; and finally folk songs of both Germany and Austria.

There was one solo in the sacred group, and solo performances in the comic opera, Tales from Old Vienna based on music by Johann Strauss, which merited special mention. Following a firm tradition, however, none of the soloists or opera leads is identified.

It was clear that a number of the boys — and particularly the lad who played the cobbler's apprentice — could have a bright future on the stage if such be their wish.

The 24 boys who sang here Sunday make up one of four choirs whch tour annually from Vienna — to South America, to Australasia, through Europe, across North America.

Boys who are choir members have been studying at their quarters in Vienna since the age of seven, three years before they can go on tour. These last about three months, and the boys are accompanied by their director, a nurse and a tutor.

Director of this choir, Uwe Theimer, indicated that the tutor's work might not be too arduous. They had found, he said, that touring and classes did not go well together — so the tour was pretty much a holiday from classroom work for the boys.

Choir work continues usually to the age of 14 when most boys' voices break. At that time they have a choice (laid down centuries ago) of retiring on a pension, of entering theological studies, or of continuing their schooling and musical education.

Every boy chosen for a choir must also be able to play a musical instrument, and a majority of those "over the hill" stay with the school to become members of various European orchestras.

Reynold's Menu Rollicking Marching Tunes

By BERT BINNY

We were a pretty fair sized audience by the time we all arrived at the McPherson Sunday afternoon to hear the Reynolds high school bands.

Furthermore, we had a most enjoyable time of it. There were three bands — all for the price of one — the junior or Green band, the senior of Blue and the Stage band.

The Green band was billed to open the program and they did just that. No fiddling around, pauses or hesitation. The curtain had scarcely reached the climax of its ascent when they launched vigorously into a rousing march, arresting every wandering thought, commanding every attention and providing the whole program with a start that could well be copied by many other stage organizations.

As a matter of fact both senior and junior bands really went to town with their march selections. We could prattle learnedly on about their attack, dynamics, intonation and so forth but the fact is they just had us walking on air with our heads in the clouds of a seventh heaven — if you'll pardon our mixed metaphors.

The Green band, with their president, Louise Robbins, as mistress of ceremonies, also played an early English suite, Three Airs from Gloucester and the more modern Teach the World to Sing. And they did them all most acceptably.

Another highlight was the performance — so appropriately on the bagpipes — of the lovely Skye Boat Song.

Half of the air of this famous, lilting song goes far back into the mists of antiquity and the other half was composed by a Miss Annie MacLeod around 100 years ago. But the piper Sunday was of the now generation, John Doig who is in Grade 7 at Cloverdale school. It was truly effective and we all clapped like crazy.

The Stage band of 16 members romped gaily through Saturday in the Park, After You've Gone and You Made Me So Very Happy.

Conductor Howard Denike explained that, after due deliberation and a secret ballot, the stage band decided that they would like him to start them off after which he could evanesce and they would carry on by themselves.

This arrangement seemed to work excellently if the resultant playing is any criterion but whether it would have been any better done differently is well beyond our office or capacity to say.

Four Charged In Petain Case

SABLES D'OLONNE (AP) — Four men were charged Saturday in connection with the removal of the remains of wartime Vichy leader Marshal Philippe Petain and were provisionally released.

Bruce Lowther

Channel 8 wishes to say thank you — its Feb. 10-11 telethon for the Vancouver Variety Club raised $315,316 and that was far above the $190,000 raised the year before. It also brings the total in the seven annual Variety Club telethons on Channels 6 and 8 to above $1 million.

One thing the Channel 8 press release didn't say, which I heard about from a knowledgeable chap, was that Channel 8 tried before the telethon to have a competing fund-raising event on Seattle's Channel 7 blacked out. But the Canadian Radio-TV Commission declined.

Viewers have shown to me they don't care much if a program on a U.S. channel is blacked out when shown at the same time by a Canadian channel — they just want to see it. But watch this practice: lawsuits are possible and they could have a lot to say some day on what you see.

C 3:30 p.m.—Gigot (1962 tragicomic failure). Jackie Gleason, like so many others, tried to be Chaplin and missed—5.

C 3:30—D-Day, the Sixth of June (1956 flop), Robert Taylor, Dana Wynter, Edmond O'Brien. Sounds like war action but is really a soaper—7.

C 7:00—Deadly Hunt (average 1971 professional killers), Peter Lawford, Tony Franciosa. Filmed in B.C.'s Howe Sound area—12.

C 8:00—I Love a Mystery (1966 private-eye takeoff), Ida Lupino, Don Knotts, Jack Weston, Les Crane, David Hartman. Might be all right—5.

C 8:30—The Connection (new shamus-chase action), Charles Durning, Ronnie Cox. Made by The French Connection people and it contains a similar car chase so don't miss that part—4.

C 9:30—Call to Danger (new syndicate kidnapping), Peter Graves, Clu Gulager, Diana Muldaur. Sounds fairish—7.

C 11:30—Five Desperate Women (fair 1972 mystery killer), Joan Hackett, Stephanie Powers, Brad Dillman, many more—4.

11:30—All the Fine Young Cannibals (terrible 1960 interracial soaper), Robert Wagner, Natalie Wood, George Hamilton, Pearl Bailey. As bad as movies will get this week, or any other week for that matter—7, 12.

C 11:50—Sergeants of Bengal (sub-par 1966 British action)—2.

C 12:00—It Started in Naples (aging 1959 romanticomedy), Clark Gable, Sophia Loren. And it ended in boredom—6, 8.

C 12:30 a.m.—Safari (good 1956 Mau Mau action), Victor Mature, Janet Leigh. Surprisingly, this is today's best film which doesn't say much for the rest—13.

Tuesday Radio

NOTE: CBU (690) will carry frequent reports on the world figure skating finals all week. No definite times are known.

8:00 p.m.—CBC Tuesday Night: Calgary poet David Young on life from 16 to 26—CBU.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

World Champions

by IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN

Alan Truscott, bridge columnist of The New York Times, recently questioned the conditions of contest of World Championship play which allow some players to play far more hands than others. In American National Championships all players must play a specified minimum number of hands. He postulated that some Italians are more champion than others, and he offered today's deal as evidence.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	Pass	2 ♣
Pass	2 ♠	Pass	3 ♥
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of diamonds.

The hand was played against a French team playing artificial methods. North's two-club bid promised a good hand but not good enough to force to game. South showed his good suit, and North's three heart bid was natural. When South rebid spades, North decided to gamble on the spade game.

West (Camillo Pabis Ticci) led the diamond queen and, when this won the trick he followed with the diamond king. In the methods of the partnership, the Italians were using Rusinow leads — the lead of the second highest of an honor sequence instead of the standard higher of an honor sequence.

East allowed the diamond king to win and West shifted to a club. Declarer won and played the heart ace followed by a heart ruff. The spade ace and a spade to the king (refusing the spade finesse (placed declarer in dummy to run the hearts. (Declarer's line of play was questionable, since, had hearts not divided evenly, he may have ended wishing he had finessed in spades.)

The defenders followed suit obligingly in hearts and declarer was able to discard his diamond losers in time to make the contract.

East (Massimo D'Alelio) could have saved the day by overtaking West's diamond king and leading another diamond for West to ruff. East could then wait patiently for the sure trick in spades.

Today's hand bears much similarity to a hand defended by Pietro Forquet and Benito Garozzo in a match against The Aces. This pair had little trouble finding the winning defense when Forquet overtook the second honor to give his partner a critical ruff.

Truscott makes a good point regarding the relative effectiveness of partnerships, and I wish that I could say that The Aces found the same winning defense. However, in the identical defensive situation solved by Forquet and Garozzo, Aces Bob Hamman and Paul Soloway, playing as a new partnership, lost their way as did Pabis Ticci and D'Alelio.

The answer is that not only must a pair be individual champions but a true champion partnership as well.

Accident Stipend For MLAs?

Compensation for MLAs and cabinet ministers who may be killed or injured on public business should be debated by a legislative committee, Premier Barrett suggested Monday.

The question was raised by Socred house leader Frank Richter during debate on estimates for the premier's office.

Richter said he was pleased B.C. lands director Walter Redel had finally received $16,500 in compensation for injuries received in Quebec while on provincial government business in 1970. But he noted there is no guarantee of compensation for members of the Legislature in similar circumstances.

Barrett in his reply commented on the "unfortunate case of a former cabinet minister" — Cyril Shelford, agriculture minister in the Socred administration, who was injured in a demonstration at New Westminster last June 7 and has since had to resign a job for medical reasons.

The premier said the government is still looking into the question of compensation for Shelford, who is in Victoria for medical treatment, and was hopeful of being able to provide adequate compensation. But Barrett added the whole question should probably go to a committee for study.

Precise Forecast Hard

Jobless Costs Murky

OTTAWA (CP) — It is difficult to predict accurately how much the government must pay for unemployment insurance benefits during the 1973-74 fiscal year, Manpower Minister Robert Andras said Monday.

He told the Commons it is possible to predict the amount "within certain boundaries" but, because of numerous variable factors, it would be hard to make a precise forecast.

The exact figure would become known after the year ends March 31, 1974, and would be included in appropriations for the following year.

Andras was replying to questions from Conservative houseleader Gerald Baldwin.

The unemployment insurance scheme is geared to pay for itself out of employer-employee contributions up to a jobless rate of four per cent. Beyond that, the government picks up the bill.

Andras was asked by two MPs Monday to investigate the handling of benefit claims.

William Knowles (PC—Norfolk-Haldimand) said unemployment insurance officials in his area are using "gestapo-type tactics" to deprive seasonal agricultural workers of payments.

Mark Rose (NDP—Fraser Valley West) asked Andras if he is aware that some officers are trying to "smuggle" information into files that would work to the disadvantage of some claimants.

He mentioned references such as "no transportation" and "exceptionally high salary expectations."

Andras said he will dismiss any employees who are mistreating bon fide claimants but first he needs proof of such wrong doing.

The Commons was also told that the March 1 deadline for applications for Opportunities For Youth (OFY) grants may be reviewed in light of indications that many communities are unaware of the date.

State Secretary Hugh Faulkner said: "I don't know if I have the right to change it." He indicated that he'd like to discuss the deadline.

John Lundrigan (PC—Gander Twillingate) asked the minister if he is prepared to set back the deadline since "hundreds of communities are not aware of the deadline."

Faulkner said it was his first indication of the problem.

Keith Taylor (PC—Churchill) asked if selection committees have been set up to process OFY applications.

Faulkner said they should be in operation by next month. The committees are formed of individuals selected for their knowledge of different areas of the country.

President Re-elected

Other officers elected were: Mark Preston, vice-president; Owen Brown, secretary; Leslie Reid, treasurer; Alan Newberry, and Mrs. Ruth Hood, Victoria directors; John Goult, and Dean Strongitharm, Oak Bay directors; Brian Smith, and John Winter, directors at large.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

New Anusol Plus promises quick relief from hemorrhoid symptoms, starting with the pain.

New Anusol Plus does first things first.

Since the pain of hemorrhoids can be unbearable, new Anusol Plus contains a topical anaesthetic. This relieves even intense hemorrhoid pain almost as soon as you apply it. It cools that burning, searing sensation. And numbs that maddening itch. And while it does all this within minutes, the relief that it gives will last for hours.

And new Anusol Plus looks after your other symptoms too.

Since twisted hemorrhoid veins often swell and become tender, new Anusol Plus helps to reduce this swelling with a gentle decongestant ingredient. To soothe and protect tender hemorrhoid tissues, it contains a smooth, rich emollient. And it has two antiseptic agents that curb infection—thus helping your hemorrhoids to heal.

In addition, new Anusol Plus now comes in a silky smooth cream form. This means that it goes on easily. Even in areas where the skin is sore and inflamed.

New Anusol Plus, in cream or suppository form, is now on sale at your nearest pharmacy. It'll give you quick relief from your painful hemorrhoid symptoms. And that's a promise.

Curtis Hits Longwindedness:

Unproductive Afternoon

Curtis
'. . . unproductive'

A Conservative member of the B.C. Legislature expressed his displeasure Monday at the long windedness and content-shy nature of the day's debate.

Hugh Curtis (PC—Saanich and the Islands) rose on a point of order following Don Phillips (SC—Peace River South), who had spoken for more than an hour.

"I can't recall spending a more unproductive afternoon in my life," Curtis said.

He said he had hoped that since the debates on the throne speech and budget speech were over that the members could get down to some serious discussion about the government's business.

Committee chairman Hartley Dent said the member's point of order was "well taken" and he referred his to two sections of house regulations which referred to the allowable content of speeches and asked the other members of the house to adhere to them.

Phillips had focused most of his attention during his lengthy speech on the need for jobs.

Some people should not drink

Maybe you think you're drinking too much. Maybe it's beginning to worry you. Maybe it's worrying your family and friends, too. If so, what do you do? Where do you go?

Your first and immediate step should be to seek the advice of your doctor. Tell him the truth. He won't be shocked and he won't let you feel embarrassed. And the advice he'll give you will be based on the collective experience of the medical profession and his own intimate knowledge of you.

He'll probably start out by giving you some straight, down-to-earth facts about alcohol and alcoholism -- two entirely different subjects.

He may tell you, for example, that about 95% of people who drink beer or wine or spirits do so moderately. But for the remaining 5%, unfortunately, the story is completely different. This group, he may point out, includes the immoderate drinkers, the abusive drinkers and the outright alcoholics. He'll probably explain that, for some reason as yet unknown to medical science, people in this group are not always able to control the amount or extent of their consumption of alcohol.

Your doctor may also explain that alcoholism is not a behavioral defect. Alcoholism is a disease. And persistent, immoderate drinking is a symptom of this disease. Scientists specializing in the study of alcoholism are virtually unanimous that just as the use of sugar, itself, is not the cause of sugar diabetes; the use of alcohol, itself, is not the cause of alcoholism. And even though scientists throughout the world continue their search and research, the unfortunate fact remains that, so far, no one knows for sure what causes the disease of alcoholism.

In your own particular case, your doctor will work with you in trying to determine why you are drinking too much. Once he fully understands the nature and extent of your problem, he may simply recommend greater moderation in your drinking. Or he may tell you that you should not drink at all -- neither beer nor wine nor spirits -- because, in this context, there can be no distinction made between them.

We don't want to sound preachy, but we do ask you to seriously consider this advice: If the question of drinking is becoming a matter of concern, we who are distillers and vintners say: "Talk it over with your doctor. Let him be the one to decide."

Lettuce

Last December I had a most illuminating interview with a prominent U.S. seedsman — actually, I was trying to pick his brains to find out what new flowers and vegetables we could expect in 1973. In the course of our chat, he told me his sale of vegetable seeds was declining steadily as compared with flowers, and his dollar volume was now less than one-third that of his flower seed sales.

He attributed this decline to several things; the popularity of apartment living, for one thing, and the modern trend toward making the backyard into an outdoor living room, complete with patio and barbecue — possibly even a pool — with no available space for a vegetable patch.

Breaking it down still further, about 60 per cent of his vegetable seed sales were for salad vegetables, and well over half of these orders were for lettuce seeds. I suppose the reason is because freshness is so important in lettuce — it suffers so much more deterioration while passing through the channels of trade than, say, carrots or potatoes — and the one sure way to get fresh, crisp lettuce is to grow it yourself.

There are two methods commonly employed in growing lettuce in the home garden. You can start your seeds indoors or under glass, transplanting the seedlings to the open garden after all danger of frost has past. Or you can sow your seeds directly into the garden rows, making small succession sowings every few weeks throughout the spring and summer to maintain a continuous supply.

Lettuce isn't just lettuce; the seed catalogues list several different basic types, and one popular Canadian catalogue offers no fewer than 19 different varieties! There is head lettuce, which makes a tight, firm head like a cabbage; in fact, the English gardeners call this type a Cabbage lettuce. Then there is leaf lettuce, which never makes a head at all, richer in vitamins and minerals but not as crisp and tender as the blanched inside portions of the head lettuce.

There is also an in-between type known as Butterhead lettuce. This type makes a loose head with pale yellow internal leaves.

Cos or Romaine lettuce makes a tall, elongated head, very good eating but quite a lot of trouble to grow in that you have to tie the outer leaves in order to blanch the centre portion.

The most popular lettuce in our household is a butterhead variety called Buttercrunch, developed by Dr. George Raleigh of Cornell University. We find it crisp and sweet, with a particularly good flavor. The leaves are very tender and easily crushed, which is why Buttercrunch is so seldom seen in the stores — it would be a very poor traveller.

The only trouble I have in growing it is birds — they prefer it over any other plant in the garden, which probably speaks well for its vitamin content. I find it necessary to net my Buttercrunch rows with "tunnels" of chicken wire netting until it has outgrown its most vulnerable seedling stage.

Another lettuce we like at our house is Premier Great Lakes. This one is very early, and while I would prefer a somewhat smaller head — in our family we can't begin to eat a whole head at one sitting — we grow it because of its crisp texture and delicate, nutty flavor, and because it heads up more surely than any other kind I have tried. It makes a good tight head even in the heat of midsummer.

Sow lettuce seeds little and often. The most common error is sowing too many seeds in one go, thereby creating a wasteful glut.

Dollar: Even Hanoi...

WASHINGTON — The big question in Washington is, "Do we or do we not vote billions of dollars to rebuild North Vietnam?"

While this battle is raging, the world money markets are selling their dollars for gold, and in just a few weeks the dollar has been considerably weakened.

Hanoi reads their newspapers, too, and it's just possible that they may raise some problems about accepting the dollars for aid.

It is not too far-fetched to assume that on Henry Kissinger's next trip to Hanoi the following exchange could take place between Muc Dam Luc, the North Vietnamese finance minister and Kissinger.

★ ★ ★

Kissinger arrives smiling. "Mr. Minister, I am happy to report to you that the congress of the United States has voted to give you three billion dollars to help you rebuild you country."

"Dollars?" the minister asks.

"Yes, three billion dollars. Is there anything wrong with that?"

"We were thinking more in terms of Japanese yen or German marks.

"That's out of the question," Kissinger replies. "The bill specifically says the aid will be in dollars."

★ ★ ★

The minister asks, "Would you be willing to give us Swiss francs?"

Kissinger tries to control his temper. "Mr. Minister, the president had a great deal of difficulty persuading congress to vote three billion dollars in aid to your country. Do you realize the spot he'll be in if he has to announce you won't accept the aid in dollars?"

"But look at it from my viewpoint," the finance minister says. "How can I tell the people of North Vietnam that the United States is giving us three billion dollars when everyone north of the DMZ line knows the dollar is in trouble. If we accept the aid in dollars, we will lose face."

"How can you say that?" Kissinger shouts. "After all our countries have been through together.

"Mr. Kissinger, we feel you negotiated the peace treaty with us in bad faith. At the time we were working out a peace with honor you never once mentioned to us that the dollar would be devalued."

★ ★ ★

"I didn't know the dollar was going to be devalued," Kissinger protests, "that's not my department."

"Well, someone should have told us. How can we trust you when we've already lost 10 per cent on the devaluation, and the ink on the documents hasn't even dried?"

Kissinger says, "Mr. Minister, surely you're not going to let a lousy devaluation stand in the way of a generation of peace."

"Mr. Kissinger, my government insists on rewriting the treaty so that aid to North Vietnam will be tied to the price of gold instead of dollars."

"Impossible," Kissinger says, "The dollar is in enough trouble as it is. If it ever gets out that even North Vietnam won't accept dollars, our monetary system could be ruined forever."

"That is not our problem. After all, you people claim you won the war, therefore, we are entitled to aid on conditions favorable to us."

★ ★ ★

"When I report this conversation back to President Nixon," Kissinger says, "he's going to become very angry, and you know what he does when he gets angry."

"Yes, we do," the minister says, "but you might remind him that if he does it, it's just going to cost him more in aid."

White Equals Blacks

JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD — Sometime back while writing about the Duke Ellington special, I mentioned that Peggy Lee, the only white star among the singing stars, was chosen becaus there is no better jazz singer, white or black. Well, the letters came in, especially from the Ella Fitzgerald fans. One typical letter came from Richard A. Diggs, a 26-year-old black man who wrote: "She was placed in the proper position as the token white and to promote her into the ranks of the great black vocalists of jazz is comparable to Jerry Quarry as the Great White Hope. In closing, I feel that an apology is due not only to me for this insult but to the entire black society."

There will be no apology for Peggy Lee who, I still say, is still among the best of the jazz singers, black or white. Even the late Louis Armstrong conceded that. "Man, if she wasn't so white white," he once told me, "I'd wonder about her ancestry. She sings the blues like they used to in New Orleans." In my time, I've heard them all — from Bessie Smith to Ivy Anderson to Billy Holliday all the way up to Ben Franklin's daughter, Aretha. My all-time favorite among the black singers is Lena Horne who can kill anyone on a nightclub floor. Granted, black singers form a great majority of jazz singers because, after all, they invented the blues. But there have been a few whites in there. Remember Mildred Bailey?

Sue Lyon, the movies' Lolita, has settled in Spain with her six-months-old daughter Nona. She is divorced from Roland Harrison, the black photographer and former pro star with the San Diego Chargers. "This is one of the few places where there is absolutely no racial prejudice," says Sue, now 26. She is speaking of Madrid. "The Spanish are so fond of babies that the child of a mixed marriage is fussed over just as much as any other baby." She recently worked in Tarot, with Fernando Rey and A Drop of Blood to Die Loving, with Chris Mitchum.

Henny Youngman offers some insight into the national economy. "I got a new English suit that a wholesaler in London sold to an importer here, who sold it to a retailer, who sold it to me. "How can so many people make a living off a suit that I haven't even paid for yet?"

Hats Off—for Good

Going through my annual clearance-of-the-files recently, I ran across a starchy letter from the president of the Stetson Company, once the most famous hat maker in the world.

He was complaining about one of the first columns I wrote, nearly 30 years ago, on the subject of men's hats. I predicted the virtual end of the hat business within my lifetime, and he rebuked me sternly.

★ ★ ★

Last year, the Stetson Company went out of business, and a few months later, HCA, the largest volume hat maker in the U.S., announced its intention to sell out.

Today, about one man in 30 buys a hat, while at the turn of the century almost every man bought one hat a year.

I have long maintained that the so-called "practical" businessmen often don't know their own business, and that social theorists, poets and even vagrants could sometimes tell them more about what is happening — or going to happen — than they learn from interviewing one another.

★ ★ ★

In my clairvoyant column of 1944, I suggested that man was seeking a new masculine image, and that the traditional hat foisted on him since Victorian times made him feel foolish, pompous and inept.

I, and all my friends under 30 at the time, wouldn't be caught dead in a hat.

But the hat makers blindly persisted in relying on classical styles when the whole mood and tempo of life had shifted into a higher gear.

It was not lack of funds or facilities as much as lack of imagination that presaged the doom of the conventional hat.

★ ★ ★

Beginning after the Second World War, man resented the bland uniformity of the dumb-looking hat, which not only failed to make him look dashing and virile (in the past, his father wanted only to look "respectable"), but also blew off in the slightest wind, failed to provide warmth and comfort, and became permanently misshapen in the first rainstorm.

When men's fashions began to veer sharply in the late '50s and '60s, those males who did elect to buy headwear went for exotic and rakish models — like the vast popularity of the Russian "envoy" type for winter — and for anything that projected an image of unconventionality.

★ ★ ★

The moral here has little to do with hats, but a lot to do with business: if you make something functional and suitable and symbolically right, you can keep turning out the same model forever.

If you make something merely traditional, you have to keep apace of changing tastes and self-images. "Style" is simply a shorthand word for "symbolism."

I've kept the letter from the head of the Stetson Company in my files. If my column had been as unresponsive to the Zeitgeist in 30 years as his hats had been, I'd be out of business, too.

Arctic Crash Probed

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Pilot Martin Hartwell, who survived for 32 days in the Arctic after his plane crashed, had navigation trouble the day before that accident, a coroner's inquest was told Monday.

Hartwell had been attempting to take his Beechcraft 18 to a lake near Parry River, N.W.T., on a five-hour flight from Yellowknife but was unable to locate his destination, said David Thomas, a Calgary mining engineer.

"I think he overshot the target because he couldn't see the ground most of the way," said Thomas, who had chartered the plane piloted by Hartwell.

Hartwell then diverted the plane to Cambridge Bay, N.W.T., landing short on fuel. He was asked there to change his plans and leave the mining party behind, and take a nurse and her two eskimo patients on a 500-mile mercy flight south to Yellowknife where there is a hospital.

His plane crashed later that day — Nov. 8 — on a wooded hillside 180 miles off his scheduled course, killing the nurse and fatally injuring a pregnant Eskimo woman in premature labor.

A 14-year-old Eskimo boy who had been diagnosed as suffering from acute appendicitis survived for 23 days after the crash. Hartwell credited him with saving his life.

The pilot was the only one left alive when found 32 days later after the most expensive — and extensive — air search in the history of the Canadian Arctic.

The inquest — held in the banquet room of the largest hotel in the territories — is attempting to determine the reason for the death of the three victims. More than 100 persons packed the room, taking every seat and sometimes standing two deep at the rear.

NEW '73 CORTINA.
EVERY YEAR IT GETS HARDER TO MAKE IT TOUGHER.

But we do.
Because we know Canada is a tough place for a little economy import to make it.

Cortina has always been one tough little car. And for '73, we've made it even tougher to meet all the demands Canadians look for in a small car.

This year, we've added an energy-absorbing bumper system. And we introduced even more stringent quality control checks. But that's all, because Cortina already has the things an economy car needs to take on Canada's rugged driving conditions.

To handle the roughest roads, Cortina has a Short and Long Arm front suspension system and a 4-bar link rear system.

To handle high-speed highway driving, Cortina has an economical, 2-litre Overhead Camshaft engine. Power front disc brakes give fast, straight stops.

And to resist salt-soaked slush, Cortina's body has a special rust resisting, electro-coated phosphate undercoating.

On the inside, we had a different set of priorities. Comfort and convenience.

There's plenty of room for five adults. And the fully reclining front bucket seats are especially comfortable. Fitted loop-pile carpeting adds luxury and extra sound insulation.

Because we built everything into Cortina that would make it tough and durable, with all the comfort you want, there's only one option to offer. The silk-smooth 3-speed automatic transmission. A radio is available as a dealer-installed accessory. And that's all.

In 2-door, 4-door or sporty 2-door GT, you'll find Cortina tough to beat.

Oil Talks March 9

Barrett Gets U.S. Date

Premier Barrett said Monday he will visit Washington, D.C., March 9 for talks with top officials of the U.S. department of the interior on the Alaskan pipeline and West Coast tanker route.

Barrett, who called the White House 10 days ago to ask for a meeting to register B.C.'s strongest opposition to the U.S. proposals, said Monday he won't be going there "just to be opposed to something."

He would give no details of the B.C. stand, however, adding it would be made public at simultaneous press conferences in Victoria and Ottawa as soon as his meeting with Acting Secretary of the Interior J. Whittaker was over.

"I won't be going there just to be opposed to something," Barrett said. "That's all for now. We're not negative critics. Even in opposition we always had an alternative to offer. And we want to deal in the proper protocol."

Liberal leader David Anderson, speaking in the Legislature following Barrett's original statement, said B.C. and Canada is going to have to offer the Americans something in return if they want to avoid the Alaska pipeline and tanker route.

Anderson said at the time Canada shouldn't insist on control and ownership over an alternate pipeline carrying Alaskan oil to North Dakota. But Barrett replied he didn't favor a foreign owned pipeline crossing this country.

Barrett said Monday he's been in contact with External Affairs Minister Michell Sharp who has arranged for a Canadian representative to accompany the B.C. delegation. The premier will be accompanied on the trip by B.C. Resources Minister Robert Williams.

Israel Unaware Plane Had Passengers: Meir

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir said Monday that Israeli warplanes would not have shot down a Libyan airliner if there was any suggestion that passengers were aboard.

Mrs. Meir, on her approval for an official visit with President Nixon, also said the army had "standing orders" to avoid any other such incident.

"... I will not go into it now, but if there was any inkling to our chief of staff ... to our men ... that there were passengers, despite all this peculiar movement of the plane ... naturally nothing would have been done to it," she said.

But she stressed at a Dulles International Airport news conference that attempts to bring peace to the Middle East should be separated from the Libyan plane incident.

"We should take the two things apart," she said. "The people of Israel feel a deep sorrow about this tragedy ... But I am convinced that during my visit here this tragedy will not interfere with the other items to be discussed."

Egypt said Monday it would ask the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) to take action on the downing of the civilian aircraft by Israeli warplanes over the Sinai Peninsula lastweek.

An Egyptian delegation spokesman said the Cairo government would ask the 125-member council, which opens meetings here today, to take "appropriate measures in the light of the magnitude of Israel's crime."

In Jerusalem, Defense Minister Moshe Dayan put the official death toll in the Israeli downing of the Libyan airliner at 104 with seven survivors.

Previous Israel announcements referred to 106 dead and seven survivors, a figure that matched Libyan reports of 113 passengers and crew aboard the aircraft.

Mrs. Meir meets with President Nixon at the White House Thursday. She declined to discuss topics to be taken up during the talks with the president, other high administration officials and members of congress.

In answer to questions about the purpose of her visit, she said she hopes to meet with Nixon and other administration officials for "very frank talks about the Middle East and what can be done there."

Guards, Money Vanish

DUSSELDORF (Reuter) — Police launched a massive hunt Monday for two young security guards after an armored security truck carrying four million West German marks — about $1,200,000 — to a bank here was found abandoned and nearly empty.

Police spokesmen said the international police organization, Interpol, had been called in to search for the two men, employees of a Cologne security firm.

Police said only 210,000 marks — about $76,000 — had been recovered from the armored truck — making it the biggest theft in Germany since the Second World War.

The money was being transported to a Dusseldorf bank from another branch.

The outcome of the confidence vote appeared to ensure approval of Turner's tax-cut-and-pension-increase budget when the final vote in the six-day budget debate is taken Wednesday night.

Hanoi Puts Freeze On Prisoner Trade

PARIS (CP) — Canada appears to have boxed itself into a diplomatic corner with its demand for a continuing political authority to which Vietnamese truce observers can report violations.

With Communist delegates to the 13-party peace conference indicating they want no part of the Canadian proposal. Canada may have no alternative but to withdraw its observer force by the extended deadline of April 30, as it has threatened to do.

Presiding at the first plenary session Monday, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp proposed that the conference itself be developed as the essential political forum to ensure action is taken to halt any reported peace violations.

But both Hanoi and the Viet Cong, aided by China, rejected the idea, especially Sharp's proposal that raports of violations be channeled through Sectretary-General Kurt Waldheim of the United Nations who would have power to reconvene the conference. Waldheim's attending the Paris meeting along with the six Communist and six non-Communist foreign ministers.

Informants said Sharp is prepared to negotiate on the role of Waldheim to meet Communist objections although the basic Canadian demand for a continuing political authority remains.

Sharp's proposal that the conference be constituted as the political authority is a watering down of his original proposal that the UN Security Council be named as the supervising body.

Originally Canada threatened to withdraw its troops by March 30 unless a political authority was established. Sharp told a news conference Canada wants to act responsibly and the deadline is being extended to April 30 to provide time to pick another observer group if Canada finds it necessary to withdraw.

Some Canadian officials were reported disappointed with what they described as the half-hearted United States support to Sharp's proposal.

It appeared the communists will insist that there be no foreign interference in Vietnamese affairs. They insist that even foreign reconstruction aid should be negotiated on a country-by-country basis and not channelled through some international organization.

U.S. State Secretary William Rogers attempted to adopt a conciliatory attitude, however, Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh, foreign minister for the Viet Cong's provisional revolutionary government, appeared unsympathetic.

She maintained that her people won "the most brutal war of aggression in history," that the Saigon adminstration is torturing hundreds of thousands of "patriots" and that the U.S. is pursuing a policy

SAIGON (UPI) — North Vietnam said Tuesday it will not release any more American prisoners of war until the U.S. accepts more responsibility for enforcing the ceasefire and communist representatives in South Vietnam are given better treatment.

Lt. Col. Bui Tin, a North Vietnamese spokesman, said, "We are in a position of absolutely having to solve these problems, although we don't want to be placed in this position.

"We are entirely in sympathy with the wives, mothers and relatives of the prisoners," he said. But, he added, "A very serious situation has developed — very serious because the ceasefire is not being respected."

Tin said the prisoner release would be halted on orders from his government in Hanoi until:

● Communist delegates to the Joint Military Commission (JMC) are given real diplomatic status.

● Housing and working areas for the JMC are improved.

● There is better observance of the truce.

● The U.S. accepts greater responsibility for enforcing the ceasefire agreement.

● Further attacks on communist delegates to the JMC are prohibited.

U.S. sources said the American delegation to the JMC had not received any notification from North Vietnamese delegates of the halt in prisoner exchange. North Vietnamese members failed to appear for a scheduled meeting of the JMC subcommission on captured persons Tuesday morning.

A defence department source in Washington said the U.S. was trying to maintain a spirit of co-operation despite the delaying tactics used by the communists. "For the time being, the general feeling is don't rock the boat," he said.

Hanoi Charged With Making Bootleg Base

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. sources reported Monday that American reconnaissance planes have turned up evidence that North Vietnam is preparing its first air base in South Vietnam with a battery of Soviet-built missiles to protect it.

The Saigon government presented U.S. aerial photographs to show SAM2 missile sites built after the Jan. 28 ceasefire around Khe Sanh in the northern quarter of South Vietnam.

Saigon's representatives asked the Internationa Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) for an immediate investigation.

They said Communist delegations to the four-party Joint Military Commission (JMC) refused to send a team to investigate what they called a "blatant" ceasefire violation with "a clear potential for sowing hatred."

U.S. sources said North Vietnamese engineers are rebuilding a 4,000-foot air strip at Khe Sanh that was first constructed by American engineers in the late 1960s.

In a letter to the ICCS, Lt.-Gen. Du Quoc Dong, chief of the South Vietnamese military delegation, said:

"We believe that the introduction of SAM2 missiles into South Vietnam after the ceasefire, as well as the overt establishment of missile sites at Khe Sanh, are actions which may well ignite the fuse of resurgent war in the near future."

Homemade Liquor Kills 50

DEW DELHI (UPI) — Homemade liquor killed 50 persons the past 24 hours at Suriapet town and its neighboring villages in the southern Andhra Pradesh state, officials in the state capital of Hyderabad said today.

They said the condition of several others in hospital was critical.

The Deccan Chronicle, Hyderabad's main English daily, reported nearly 1,000 persons were suffering from the effects of the liquor. Suriapet, located 75 miles east of Hyderbad and 250 miles north of Madras City, is a roadway junction for passenger buses and freight lorries.

Unofficial reports placed the number of dead a higher figure.

Several persons in the countryside have died after buying the liquor from smugglers and unlicensed shops at Suriapet and police have not traced the victims, unofficial reports in Hyderabad said.

Japan Fears U.S. Economic War

'We May Well Need Shelters'

By SAM JAMESON
Colonist - Los Angeles Times Service

TOKYO — A Japanese cabinet minister has confided that he fears Tokyo may become President Nixon's post-Vietnam target.

"We may well need shelters before this ends," the minister said, only half joking about the economic offensive against Japan that he feels is shaping up in Washington.

Outlines of the American intention to press Japan for removal of trade barriers, now that Tokyo has been forced into its second parity change in 14 months, have taken shape in a series of pronouncements by government officials, including Nixon himself. The targets also have been cited: Japan's last 33 import quotas, non-tariff trade barriers, high tariffs, and American access to investment in Japan — particularly in the retailing field.

In April or early May, William D. Eberle, the president's chief trade negotiator, will get together with Japanese officials for the fourth time in a year to attempt to win concessions. Then, probably in June, American cabinet secretaries in charge of economic affairs will fly to Japan for a full-dress session of the U.S.-Japan trade and economic committee.

Nixon's first economic move against Japan — and the rest of the world — Aug. 15, 1971, came when he suspended the convertibility of the dollar to gold and slapped a 10 per cent surcharge on most imports into the United States. Two months later he coerced Japan — and three other Asian nations — into signing agreements to limit textile exports to the United States.

Then came the 10 per cent devaluation of the dollar.

Yasuhiro Nakasone, minister of international trade and industry, told a meeting of the ministry's regional director that makers of Christmas decorations, scarves, sporting goods, eyeglasses, artificial pearls, and buttons were threatened by the new parity change.

The problem, in part, is that the Nixon moves have touched only the external monetary blemishes without treating the internal trade

Courting Sunshine Alley

Take a generous measure of that famous Cowichan Valley sunshine. Add three Cowichan high school students — in this case, from left, Karen Linnell, Pam McIlven and Lorna Geier — and put them on tennis courts right across from school. You get a perfect day out. Girls are enrolled in Duncan's community recreation program, which includes tennis.

Parents Breathe Sighs of Relief

DUNCAN — Parents of children attending Koksilah elementary school breathe easier since a highways department announcement that a controlled stop light will be installed at the controversial school crosswalk on Trans-Canada Highway.

Highways Minister Robert Strachan notified the parents by mail of the department's decision, and suggested a responsible parent be hired to control the light while children are travelling to and from school.

Mrs. Margaret Carpentier, a spokesman for the parents, said they were extremely pleased with Strachan's quick response to their demands some protection be given their children while they were crossing the busy highway.

Members of the traffic control branch of the department viewed the situation at the crosswalk and decided a light should be installed. In his letter Strachan said it may be several months before the department can have a light functioning at the site, due to other work commitments.

Mrs. Carpentier also praised the Cowichan school board for its continuing fight to have the crossing made safer.

The school board had approached the highways department last year in an effort to improve the crossing, and early in January the department reduced the speed limit on the highway at Koksilah from 50 to 40.

The board continued pressing for the installation of a controlled traffic light, and when a six-year-old pupil was struck by a car at the crossing last month the issue was brought to the public's attention. Following the accident the parents submitted a petition to Strachan requesting a controlled traffic light.

Environment Vital In Group's Plans

Research into the relationship between man and his resources is already underway on the north end of Vancouver Island, delegates to a committee planning the 1973 Man and Resources year in the province were told in Victoria recently.

A five-point program is already underway, according to Keith Seguin.

Other areas of the province are slower getting organized — apparently waiting to see if provincial financing will be available to aid research.

In Victoria public meetings to outline needs and possible areas of study will be held in Victoria high school at 8 p.m. March 8 and 13.

On the north end of the island, according to Seguin, some 30 people are involved in studies, and will shortly be reporting to another public meeting.

Community interest is centred around the John Hart generating station on Campbell River which threatens to alter the entire environment on the river as it is changed to a station that will deal with peak hours of electricity demand.

Environmental studies are being carried out at present.

The effect of mining on Buttle Lake is another possible area of concern and therefore of study, said Seguin, so that recommendations on future developments could be made.

A further field of study involved oil pollution, which came sharply into focus on northern Island following the staggering spill at Alert Bay.

The next public meeting involving northern Vancouver Island will be held Tuesday, March 6, at 7:30 p.m. at Campbell River high school.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the to keep their services or location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish products before the public every day.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action-ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call.

PORT ALBERNI — Local logging contractors have filed for a B.C. Supreme Court injunction in order to have the MacMillan Bloedel "force majeur" clause lifted allowing them to return to work.

Clifford Coulson, a spokesman for the contractors, said the fallers would be in a better bargaining position if they were working.

Under the force majeur clause the company has the right to suspend agreements with contractors in the event of "fire, flood, explosion, strike, lockout, or other labor disturbances."

Owner-Contractors Go to Court in IWA Dispute

By RODNEY WADE,
Colonist Correspondent

PORT ALBERNI — Local logging contractors have filed for a B.C. Supreme Court injunction in order to have the MacMillan Bloedel "force majeur" clause lifted allowing them to return to work.

Clifford Coulson, a spokesman for the contractors, said the fallers would be in a better bargaining position if they were working.

Under the force majeur clause the company has the right to suspend agreements with contractors in the event of "fire, flood, explosion, strike, lockout, or other labor disturbances."

Four Days

Trouble originally flared two weeks ago when the IWA staged a four-day walkout. The dispute was over the use of independent contractors within the boundaries of the IWA Local 1-85's jurisdiction.

It was four days before labor department mediator Jack Sherlock was able to draft a memorandum of agreement that seemed acceptable to all parties. However, it later transpired that at least 50 of the contractors and operators refused to sign.

Amid all the furor, and as two-thirds of the IWA loggers returned to work, MLA Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound) in the Legislature accused the IWA of committing serious transgressions of the labor law — specifically Section 6 of the B.C. Labor Relations Act.

Williams asked Attorney-general Alex Macdonald to investigate the unions' alleged attempts to force contractors to sign the agreement.

The memorandum of agreement which the contractors and owner-operators were asked to sign by the union, stated that all employees of the contractors and owner-operators would join the local, that operators using their own equipment would pay to the local a fee equal to union dues, that stickers would be provided for equipment, that the coast master agreement would apply to these operators and their employees and that seniority would operate within the compass of individual operations.

Conditions

Earl Foxcroft, president of the IWA Local 1-85, said there was a number of good reasons for union wanting the contractors to sign.

He cited the fact that union members were concerned that the independent operators often work weekends, thus breaking down conditions the union had fought for. In addition, he explained that not all operators who work within the jurisdiction of the local are members of the various truck loggers associations. A list of these people was not available to the union.

Coulson, when interviewed, pointed out that independent contractors often have to work long hours in order to make ends meet. They had payments to make on machinery and therefore worked as much as possible. He defended the right of an individual to work when he chose to without having to get a permit.

He added that the negotiations carried out by Sherlock had been hastened by pressure because of the shortage of logs and the fact the union wanted to get its members back to work.

Compromise

He stated he was certain agreement could be reached with the other parties as the operators were willing to compromise a little and allow a permit system — Under this method the contractors would pay a fee of $8.17 in return for the permit.

But they would not receive union benefits even though this sum was equal to union dues.

"We would encourage employees to join the IWA — in fact all my 60 employees are members of the union. But I see no reason why independent businessmen should have to pay sums equal to dues."

About a week ago, the force majeur clause was invoked by MacMillan Bloedel, thus suspending the contracts of 17 independent operators. These businessmen have been forced to bring their trucks out of the bush. They are all parked on a lot in the downtown area awaiting the reuslt of the injunctions.

As a Whole

A special committee organized after a fallers' conference last November has sent out a list of proposals dealing not only with changes in falling but changes in the forest industry as a whole.

The proposals come from the "rank and file members" committee which has its headquarters in Nanaimo.

The committee has accused the IWA of having an incompetent leadership and an inadequate structure. It has recommended more rank-and-file involvement from the IWA members.

Among a list of 22 proposals:

● That all tradesmen, whether boommen, truck drivers or fallers, have their own advisory committee. These would take part in negotiations and advise negotiators during contract talks and disputes.

● The committee also recommends that all IWA officers shall be limited to four years in office after which they shall return to industry for one year. And also that sub-locals be re-established in all locals, and that an education program on union affairs be carried out among the membership.

These suggestions from the rank and file committee of IWA members follow closely the format laid out by the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada union during its recent attempts to win certification at the Somass mill in Port Alberni.

And on the matter of the present contractors' dispute, the committee says that "it's a cold, hard fact that the contractors and owner-operators are fast becoming the most serious threat to our job security today and a wholesale solution must be found now — one that is fair to both parties and the parent company."

Representatives of the union and the contractors met with Labor Minister Bill King this past Thursday and Friday at separate sessions. Both parties came away stating that the government had listened sympathetically.

Commotion Erupts In Court

COURTENAY — A commotion erupted in Provincial Court here when Patricia Ann Thompson, 25, of Comox, was sent to prison for one year on a drug charge.

Mrs. Thompson had previously pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of marijuana for the purposes of trafficking. She was charged jointly with William Norman Ewanchuk, 19, also of Comox, following an RCMP raid on premises there Feb. 1.

Ewanchuk has pleaded not guilty to the offence and has been remanded to March 5.

He was in the courtroom when Mrs. Thompson was sentenced and caused somewhat of a rhubarb.

He was seated in the public gallery next to RCMP Constable Al Decker, a member of the general investigations section of the local detachment.

When Judge John Ryland ordered Mrs. Thompson taken into custody, Decker arose and headed for the woman, only to be grabbed by Ewanchuk who said "I want to see you."

Hands Shrugged Off

Decker shrugged off Ewanchuk's hands, but Ewanchuk then confronted Ryland and said the women had taken the blame for him in the case because "I've been in trouble before."

"You'd better not say any more," the judge cautioned him, as Mrs. Thompson was led from the courtroom in tears.

The judge also ordered a two-year probation period, during which she must disassociate herself completely from the drug scene.

He noted, before passing sentence, that medical opinion points out that marijuana is "psychologically addictive" and leads users to "use of more sinister drugs."

He said it was Mrs. Thompson's first offence, but pointed to the "staggering rise" in use of drugs in this area and that the marijuana found had a street value of $500.

Crown counsel Terry Ryan had told the court earlier that two large plastic bags containing more than 50 baggies of marijuana had been discovered by police in the Comox apartment.

Trial Without Jury

Mrs. Thompson was not represented by counsel and had chosen trial by magistrate without a jury.

Another heavy sentence was handed out when 58-year-old John Harrison of Royston pleaded guilty to impaired driving and refusing to take a breath test.

He was fined $800 and ruled off the highways in Canada for six months.

Crown evidence indicated Harrison had been followed by police from Cumberland and had ignored the police car's emergency equipment. When he was finally stopped in the Royston area, he began to walk away from officers.

Harrison admitted he had a previous conviction for driving with a high blood-alcohol count in 1970. He was fined $450 on the impaired driving count and $350 for refusing the breath test.

In passing sentence, the judge once again commented that incidences of impaired driving in this area are "rising steadily." He warned two weeks ago that penalties would become more severe.

Alberni Liberals:

NDP Deceiving People

PORT ALBERNI — Local Liberals have accused the NDP government of deceiving the people of British Columbia. In a release, the Alberni Liberal Association said that "not only does Bill 42 severely restrict the sale of agricultural land but it also gives the land commission power to acquire any land on its own terms. Furthermore, there is no right to compensation for loss due to a commission ruling nor is there any right to appeal such a ruling.

"Although the government has led the public to believe the act applies only to farmland, this is not true.

"In fact the act is generally worded so that it could apply to almost any land, public or private, in British Columbia.

While the association supports the idea of farmland preservation it feels that Bill 42's undemocratic features far outweigh the good that is contained in the act."

A spokesman for the local association said Monday he could foresee the situation where land was purchased from an owner not at its current market price but at the price paid at the time of original purchase by present owner.

In that circumstance there would be no compensation for a man whose property bought 20 years ago at $200, now was worth 10 times that amount, and yet was purchased at the 1953 price.

The spokesman added he was sure the bill would be amended before it was finally passed.

Woodworker Local Offers Accountant

DUNCAN — Members of the IWA can receive the assistance of an accountant this year for filing their tax returns, Local 1-80 financial secretary Ed Linder has announced.

Linder said the union would retain the services of an accountant as part of a continuing effort to provide additional benefits for their members.

"We believe this service to be a first and we know of no other local union in our international union to institute this service prior to us," said Linder.

Local 1-80 president Fernie Viala said, "It is our understanding that the new income tax form is more complicated than in the past, and because of this many of our members will have to seek professional help which will be substantially higher in cost than the rate charged by the accountant retained by the IWA Local 1-80."

Weather Blocks Search for Two

QUEEN CHARLOTTE CITY — Low cloud and heavy winds Monday prevented helicopters and boats from searching for two men missing off the coast of the Queen Charlotte Islands.

The search will begin at first light this morning, weather permitting.

The boat of the two men, Jim Piper, 38, and his son Leo, 17, both of Queen Charlotte City, was found sunk Saturday off the west coast of Moresby Island.

But rescue officials say there is still hope the Pipers may be found alive, because their 12-foot fibreglass skiff was not found with the boat, and it is possible the two men may have made their way to shore in it.

A spokesman for the Pacific Rescue Centre in Victoria and the RCMP in Queen Charlotte City put the story together this way:

The Pipers left Queen Charlotte City Feb. 12 in their 32-foot log salvage vessel, the Baker Island No. 1. They were due back last Wednesday, but didn't return and were reported missing.

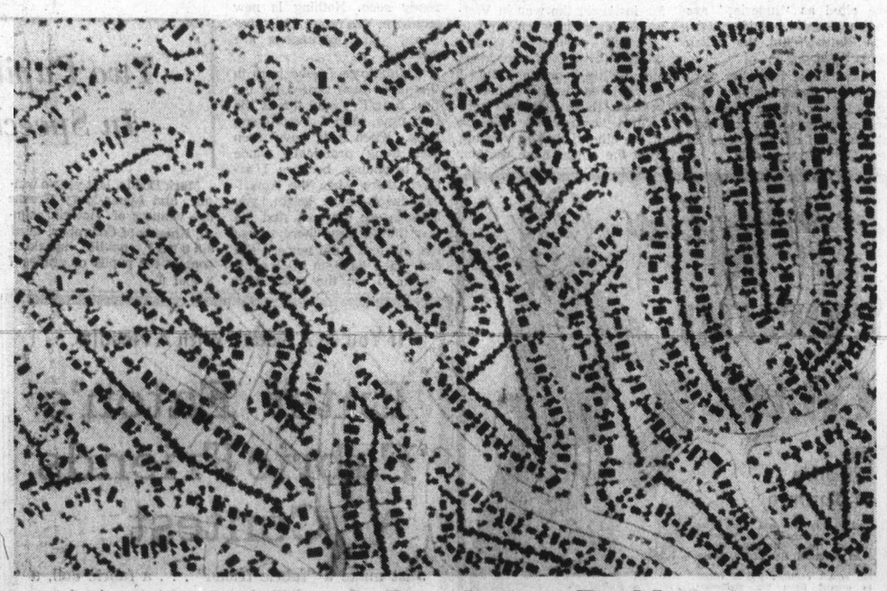
After they were reported missing, a search was begun and on Thursday afternoon, a pilot in a Trans-Provincial Airlines plane out of Sandspit spotted a rope in the water.

Saturday divers went down in the area where the rope had been spotted, and found the boat, a former steel tug. She was in about 80 feet of water off Kitgora Point on the west coast of the islands.

An air search for the men had been held up since because of poor weather conditions, including winds gusting up to 60 knots.

When the search begins, taking part will be a Canadian Coast Guard helicopter from Prince Rupert, an RCMP Beaver fixed-wing aircraft, also from Prince Rupert, and a fisheries department vessel.

The air search is necessary because of the rough terrain along the cliffs near where the boat was found, making ground searches difficult.



Cowichan's Developing Problem

Partial sketch of controversial proposed housing development on slope of Mount Tzouhalem at Maple Bay Road, North Cowichan, shows how Kingsview Properties Ltd. want to develop 1,313 units within 10 years. However, Maple Bay residents and ratepayers in nearby areas oppose plan, claiming that not only would development destroy rural character of area but would also create severe problems. Matter is to be discussed at two public meetings early in March.

Stupich Should Resign, Tory Hints

NANAIMO — The president of the Nanaimo Progressive Conservative Association has hinted that Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich should resign from the provincial cabinet.

Ted Carson said in a statement that a statement earlier by Stupich that the minister was "surprised" by the Gabriola Island ferry proposal put forth by the highways department last month is what he termed "a little unusual."

He quoted the minister as saying during an all-candidates meeting here in the provincial election campaign that if Nanaimo city council did not know what was happening with the proposed harbor development here, "then the city council members should be replaced."

He quoted Stupich further: "Elected officials must follow public wants and must be kept informed and in return, inform the public."

And then Carson asked, "Has he kept himself informed and has he informed the public?"

The Tory leader also termed NDP government statements that there is little or no unrest in the business community as "ludicrous."

"How can there not possibly be with the type of rash statements and socialistic legislation that has been proposed to date," he said.

"The government monopoly auto insurance, competitive general insurance and the possible intrusion into the auto body repair shops, certainly go much further than most people thought it would and, indeed, is far more socialistic than the legislation in Saskatchewan and Manitoba."

Carson also criticized the government on its agricultural land-freeze legislation, suggesting no provision has been made to compensate farmers for any loss due to deflated land values since this land has been barred from subdivision.

Recovery By Girl Excellent

PORT ALICE — A 10-year-old school girl, sick with diphtheria since last week, is making an excellent recovery, Dr. Darryl Morris said at the weekend. He said the child had been innoculated for the disease and this contributed to her quick recovery.

Morris said about 200 other elementary school children were to be re-innoculated Monday. There were no other suspected cases of diphtheria in this community of 1,500.
